FLORIDA'S SUPPLY / DEMAND SYSTEM

Funded by the U.S. Department of Labor, Workforce Data Quality Initiative
To be released in Early 2013

Labor Market Statistics Center (LMS)

Florida's Occupational Supply/Demand System

- DEO LMS applied for and won a competitive grant from the U.S. Department of Labor, Workforce Data Quality Initiative for one million dollars (2010-2013)
- The grant is funding the new Occupational Supply/Demand System (S/D) which will be the most comprehensive and timely system available in the nation
- The S/D system is designed to improve education and training alignment to better meet the needs of business
- The S/D system is designed for business, workforce, education, economic development, job seekers, and students
- The data are by statewide and by region and will be web based

Florida's Supply/Demand System

The indicators of potential Labor Supply by occupation are :

- Workforce, public and private postsecondary education – (enrollees and completers by occupation)
- Jobseekers registered at career one-stop centers

The indicators for Labor Demand are:

- The Conference Board's Help Wanted OnLine (HWOL) data series of monthly job ad openings by occupation (for short term analysis)
- DEO LMS average annual projected openings by occupation (for long term analysis)

Other Information:

- Current employment and wages by occupation

How will the data be used to help Florida and the economy?

- Workforce and education will use the data to create better alignment of education and training offerings in meeting occupational demands of business
- Economic developers will have the most comprehensive and timely occupational S/D data readily available to support business recruitment in their analysis of available labor supply
- Students will benefit from having real time information on jobs in demand now and in the future; jobseekers can use the information for re-employment purposes

The Florida Department of Economic Opportunity (DEO), Labor Market Statistics Center has developed this new tool that allows users to view occupational supply and demand information in Florida. These data help in making informed choices for allocating training resources, helping job seekers with re-employment information and providing timely data for workforce, economic developers and education.

The application allows the user to compare sources of potential occupational supply (graduates from post secondary educational programs and job seekers) with sources of occupational demand (job openings). The education and occupation data contained in this tool are comprehensive and can be explored in many different ways. There are two report options: a standard report and a custom report.

Standard Report

- The Standard Report uses the most recent occupational data available.
- Total Supply consists of data from workforce and educational training sources as well as jobseekers.
- Data can be selected by Workforce Region (RWBs).
- Data can be selected by aggregating Workforce Regions as a single 'Super' region.
- Data can be selected for short-term analysis using online job ads or long-term analysis using employment projections as demand.
- Data are selected by Major Occupational Group(s) and/or specific occupation(s).

Custom Report

- Report is fully customizable by the user
- User picks the timeframes for which the report gathers data.
 - View the most current data or select historical data.
- User can select to see any or all of the following occupational data:
 - Potential Occupational Supply Indicators
 - Enrollees
 - Completers/Graduates
 - Job Seekers
 - Additional Occupational Information
 - Current Employment
 - Projected Employment
 - Wages
 - Targeted Occupations List
 - Education Level

DATA CAVEATS

- All supply is potential supply
- Completers/graduates are counted in each occupation that is related to their program of study
- Enrollees may or may not complete training
- Completers may already have a job or may have moved out of the geographic area
- Registered jobseekers in Employ Florida Marketplace may or may not be qualified for the job they are seeking
- Only half of all registered job seekers have their desired occupation identified in the system
- Job openings only include online job ad postings (not all jobs are posted on the internet)
- The job ads have been de-duplicated but some duplicates will still exist
- Time frames for supply and demand data elements differ
- District and Florida College System enrollees and completers are counted as supply in the workforce region where the institutions exist and are not statewide based
- University graduates are statewide supply only and cannot be parsed to workforce regions. However, the Statewide report does include university graduates in supply calculations
- Some occupations are seasonal and are hired at specific times of the year, such as teachers, agricultural jobs, and tourism occupations
- At the local level, information may be known that would override the use of particular occupational supply/demand data, such as incoming or expanding firm(s)

NOTE:

- Asterisk(s) on occupational titles indicate these minimum requirements:

* Work Experience, Plus a Bachelor's Degree or Higher

 Work Experience in a Related Occupation

 Long-Term On-the-Job Training

Benefits and Uses of the Occupational Supply/Demand System

The Supply/Demand Web Portal Encompasses Workforce, Education, Labor Market Information, and Real Time Occupational Demand of Florida Employers

All WILL BE ABLE TO VIEW AND BENEFIT FROM:

- Pipeline of education and training enrollees by occupation
- Supply of completers/graduates by occupation by region and statewide
- Available labor supply and corresponding wages for business recruitment
- Current online job ads as an indicator of occupational demand by region and statewide
- Contrast of supply to demand to see where occupational shortages exist
- Entry, median and experienced pay for each occupation, by region and statewide
- Data visualization of job ads by occupation by region and statewide, displayed by year and month since May of 2005

WORKFORCE and ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT

- Information on occupations in demand by region to support re-employment activities especially for the long term unemployed whose previous job skills may not be current
- Current employer demand will be used to improve program planning and the supply of trained individuals in meeting the hiring needs of business
- Occupational supply for business recruitment in support of job creation
- Workforce participants can view current demand of employers and see where shortages may exist prior to entering short-term training

EDUCATION

- Current and projected employer demand will be used to improve program planning to align the supply of trained workers in meeting business needs
- Students at all levels can view current demand of employers, as well as long-term projected occupational demand to help determine needed training in fields with job shortages
- Counselors can demonstrate to students how their highest level of education completion impacts their future standard of living and this may assist in grounding students to reality in terms of their goals and aspirations
