I. Summary:

The bill makes changes to ch. 985, F.S., relating to juvenile justice, to address the provision of transition to adulthood services to older youth who are in the custody of, or under the supervision of, the Department of Juvenile Justice (DJJ).

The bill requires that transition to adulthood services for a youth must be part of an overall plan leading to the total independence of the child from DJJ’s supervision, and the bill specifies the requirements of the overall plan.

The bill also provides that youth who are adjudicated delinquent and who are in legal custody of the Department of Children and Families (DCF) are eligible to receive DCF’s independent living transition services pursuant to s. 409.1451, F.S. Adjudication of delinquency may not be considered, by itself, as disqualifying criteria for eligibility in DCF’s Independent Living Program. This is consistent with current DCF policy.

The bill also permits the court to retain jurisdiction for a year beyond the child’s 19th birthday if they are participating in the transition to adulthood program.

This bill substantially amends ss. 985.03 and 985.0301, F.S.

This bill creates s. 985.461, F.S.

II. Present Situation:

Background

Florida Juvenile Justice System

Historically, Florida provided services to children who are delinquent under a "rehabilitative" model of justice. When all "proceedings relating to children" were under the auspices of the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services (HRS),<sup>1</sup> HRS's approach to children involved in dependency proceedings and/or delinquency proceedings was the same, i.e., to provide social services to the child and his or her family. Provisions relating to both dependent and delinquent children were contained in ch. 39, F.S.

The first of a number of efforts to shift the state's juvenile justice system away from a social services model occurred in 1994. The Legislature created the Department of Juvenile Justice and provided for the transfer of powers, duties, property, records, personnel, and unexpended balances of related appropriations and other funds from HRS's Juvenile Justice Program Office to the new agency.<sup>2</sup> DJJ was assigned responsibility for children who were delinquent and children and families in need of services (CINS/FINS).<sup>3</sup> Statutory provisions relating to children being served in the juvenile justice system remained in ch. 39, F.S., and most of the new agency's employees were former HRS employees.

In 1997, while few changes were made to substantive law, provisions relating to children who were delinquent and CINS/FINS children and their families were removed from ch. 39, F.S. Provisions relating to CINS/FINS were placed in newly created Chapter 984, F.S. and provisions relating to children who are delinquent were placed in newly created Chapter 985, F.S.<sup>4</sup>

In 2000, comprehensive legislation, known as the "Tough Love Law," provided statutory authority for DJJ to change its organizational structure. This legislation signified the most dramatic policy shift away from the social services model and toward a criminal justice approach.<sup>5</sup> However, even under the "Tough Love" plan, DJJ maintains that:

The juvenile justice system continued to be operationally and philosophically distinct from the adult criminal justice system. Florida continues to segregate juveniles from their adult counterparts, although there has been an expansion of the circumstances under which a juvenile can be prosecuted as an adult. Youth continue to be managed under a strategy of redirection and rehabilitation, rather than punishment. Although the State strengthened its hold on juvenile delinquents

<sup>3</sup> The term "child in need of services" means a child for whom there is no pending investigation into an allegation or suspicion of abuse, neglect, or abandonment; no pending referral alleging the child is delinquent; or no current supervision by the Department of Juvenile Justice or the Department of Children and Family Services for an adjudication of dependency or delinquency. The child must also be found by the court to be habitually truant from school, to have persistently run away from home, or to have persistently disobeyed the reasonable demands of his or her parents and to be beyond their control. Section 984.03(9), F.S.

under the "Tough Love" plan, the system maintained focus on "treatment" designed to effect positive behavioral change.<sup>6</sup>

DJJ is currently required to provide independent living services as a program component of both the early delinquency intervention and the serious or habitual juvenile offender programs.<sup>7</sup>

Independent Living Transition Services for Dependent Children

Each year thousands of dependent children leave state foster care systems because they reach the age of 18 and are no longer eligible for out-of-home care. Since the early 1980's, research and anecdotal evidence have indicated that many of these young adults experience numerous difficulties in their attempts to achieve self-sufficiency. When compared to young adults with no exposure to the child welfare system, former foster youth are less likely to earn a high school diploma or GED and subsequently, have lower rates of college attendance.<sup>8</sup> They suffer more from mental health problems; have a higher rate of involvement with the criminal justice system; are more likely to have a difficult time achieving financial independence, thus increasing their reliance on public assistance; and experience high rates of housing instability and homelessness.<sup>9</sup>

The federal government responded to the needs of foster care youth who age out by enacting the Foster Care Independence Act of 1999 (known as the CFCIP or the Chafee Act).<sup>10</sup> The Chafee Act provides states with flexible funding that enables programs to be designed and conducted to:

- Identify and assist youths who are likely to remain in foster care until 18 years of age;
- Provide education, training, and services necessary to obtain employment for those youths;
- Prepare those youths to enter postsecondary training and education institutions; and
- Provide support through mentors and the promotion of interactions with dedicated adults.<sup>11</sup>

Age restrictions were also eliminated, allowing states to offer independent living services to youth earlier than age 16.<sup>12</sup> The Chafee Act grants wide discretion to the states, allowing them to set their own criteria regarding which foster care youths receive services.<sup>13</sup> However, states must use objective criteria for determining eligibility for benefits and services under the programs and for ensuring fair and equitable treatment of benefit recipients.<sup>14</sup>

With the enactment of federal legislation and increased available funding, the 2002 Florida Legislature established a new framework for the state’s independent living transition services to be provided to older youth in foster care.<sup>15</sup> Specifically provided for was a continuum of independent living transition services to enable youth who are 13 to 17 years of age and in foster care to develop the skills necessary for successful transition to adulthood and self-sufficiency. Service categories established for minors in foster care include the following:<sup>16</sup>

CATEGORIES OF SERVICES	SERVICES INCLUDED	ELIGIBILITY
Pre-independent living services	Life skills training, educational field trips and conferences.	13 and 14 year olds in foster care.
Life skills services	Training to develop banking and budgeting skills, parenting skills, and time management and organizational skills, educational support, employment training, and counseling.	15,16, and 17 year olds in foster care.
Subsidized independent living services	Living arrangements that allow the child to live independently of the daily care and supervision of an adult in a setting that is not required to be licensed under s. 409.175, F.S.	16 and 17 year olds who demonstrate IL skills.

For fiscal year 2009-2010, $35.6 million has been budgeted for the Independent Living Transition Services Program from a number of sources.<sup>17</sup> This represents a $3.9 million increase in the budget from fiscal year 2008-2009, but is $2.9 million less than was actually spent in fiscal year 2008-2009.

If a dependent child is also adjudicated delinquent, DCF shares responsibility for that child with DJJ and while not specifically required by statute, DCF allows youth who are eligible for independent living transition services under s. 409.1451, F.S., and who have been adjudicated delinquent to receive those services.<sup>18</sup>

Court Jurisdiction

Except under certain specified circumstances, the court shall retain jurisdiction of a child who has committed a delinquent act, unless relinquished by its order, until the child reaches 19 years of age, with the same power over the child that the court had prior to the child becoming an adult.<sup>19</sup> Current law provides that the court may retain jurisdiction beyond 19 years of age under certain other circumstances, including, but not limited to:

<sup>15</sup> The department provided independent living services to older youth in foster care prior to the creation of s. 409.1451, F.S., with provisions for those services appearing in a number of sections of Florida Statutes, including s. 409.145, F.S., relating to care of children (2001), and 409.165, F.S., relating to alternative care of children (2001).

<sup>16</sup> Section 409.1451(4), F.S. The legislation also contained provisions for young adults who are 18 to 23 years of age who were formerly in foster care, including aftercare services, the Road-to-Independence Program, and transitional support services. See s. 409.1451(5), F.S.

- Jurisdiction may be retained until 22 years of age for a youth placed in a juvenile prison or in a high-risk or maximum-risk residential commitment program to allow the child to participate in a juvenile conditional release program.
- Jurisdiction may be retained until 21 years of age for a youth committed to the DJJ for placement in an intensive residential treatment program for 10-year-old to 13-year-old offenders, in the residential commitment program in a juvenile prison, in a residential sex offender program, or in a program for serious or habitual juvenile offenders, solely for the purpose of the child completing the program.

III. Effect of Proposed Changes:

The bill creates a definition for “transition to adulthood” to mean services for youth who are in the custody of, or under the supervision of, DJJ with the objective of acquisition of knowledge, skills, and aptitudes that are essential to pre-social, self-supporting adult life. The bill specifies that these services may include, but are not limited to:

- Assessment of the youth’s ability and readiness for adult life;
- A plan for the youth to acquire knowledge, information, and counseling sufficient to make a successful transition to adulthood; and
- Services that have been proven effective towards achieving the objective of transition to adulthood.

The bill provides legislative intent that DJJ may provide older youth in its custody or under its supervision opportunities to participate in transition to adulthood services while in DJJ’s commitment programs or in probation or conditional release programs in the community.<sup>20</sup> The bill specifies that these services should be reasonable and appropriate for the youths’ respective ages or for any special needs the youth may have.

The bill also provides that youth who enter a DJJ placement from a foster care placement, and who are in legal custody of DCF are eligible to receive DCF’s independent living transition services pursuant to s. 409.1451, F.S. The bill also provides that court-ordered commitment or probation is not a barrier to eligibility for youth to receive the array of services available if they were in foster care. This is consistent with current DCF policy.

The bill provides that adjudication of delinquency may not be considered, by itself, as disqualifying a youth for eligibility to receive independent living transition services from DCF. The bill specifies that if, upon exiting a DJJ residential program, the youth’s family abandons or deserts the youth or otherwise refuses to assume parental duties, the adjudication of delinquency is not an impediment to a subsequent adjudication of dependency and eligibility for the foster care system.

The bill allows DJJ to:

- Assess a youth’s skills and abilities to live independently and become self sufficient;

<sup>20</sup> This appears to be a similar authority to that which currently exists in the conditional release program operated by DJJ for youth transitioning back to the community, pursuant to s. 985.46, F.S.

- Develop a list of age-appropriate activities and responsibilities to be incorporated into the youth's written case plan for any youth 17 years of age or older. The activities may include, but are not limited to life skills training, banking and budgeting skills, interviewing and career planning skills, parenting skills, personal health management, time management or organizational skills, educational support, employment training, and counseling;
- Provide information related to social security insurance benefits and public assistance;
- Request parental or guardian permission for the youth to participate in the transition to adulthood services. Upon such consent, the age-appropriate activities must be incorporated into the youth's written case plan. The case plan may include specific goals and objectives and must be reviewed and updated quarterly. The plan must not interfere with parents or guardians rights to train the child; and
- Contract for transition to adulthood services, which include residential services and assistance, that allow for the child to live independently of the daily care and supervision of an adult in a setting that is not required to be licensed under s. 409.175, F.S. The bill provides for program eligibility to include youth at least 17 but not yet 19 years of age and who are not a danger to the public and have a demonstrated aptitude for the program.

The bill requires that services focused in the transition to adulthood for a child must be part of an overall plan leading to the total independence of the child from DJJ's supervision. The plan must include:

- A description of the skills of the child and a plan for learning additional identified skills;
- The behavior that the child has exhibited which indicates an ability to be responsible and a plan for developing additional responsibilities;
- A plan for future educational, vocational, and training skills;
- Present financial and budgeting capabilities and a plan for improving resources and abilities;
- A description of the proposed residence;
- Documentation that the child understands the specific consequences of his or her conduct in such a program;
- Documentation of proposed services to be provided by DJJ and other agencies, including the type of services and the nature and frequency of contact; and
- A plan for maintaining or developing relationships with family, other adults, friends, and the community.

These changes will permit DJJ to provide services to youth in their custody or supervision which may increase a youth's ability to live independently and become a self-sufficient adult.

The bill also amends s. 985.0301(5)(a), F.S., to allow the court to retain jurisdiction for an additional 365 days beyond a youth's 19th birthday if the youth is participating in a DJJ transition to adulthood program.

V. Fiscal Impact Statement:

A. Tax/Fee Issues:

None.

B. Private Sector Impact:

None.

C. Government Sector Impact:

DCF and DJJ estimate no fiscal impact from the bill.

Without surveying the community-based care lead agencies (CBCs) and running a series of reports specifically to determine the number, DCF does not know how many dependent children are also involved with DJJ.

- For children 13-17 years of age it has been reported that independent living counselors do continue to have contact with this age group in most areas of the state. While Florida Safe Families Network (FSFN) data is low, children in this age group on probation, who are residing with their foster families/group home staff, should still be receiving independent living services at the level they were receiving through the foster parent/group homes before the youth went on probation.
- DCF receives a file from DJJ of all children in the delinquency system (detention, community supervision and residential) and matches these youth to those who are dependent. In January 2010, 597 youth were "crossover youth," or youth involved with both agencies.<sup>21</sup>
