I. Summary:

The bill requires district school boards to provide disability history and awareness instruction in all K-12 public schools, beginning with the 2013-2014 school year. The instruction must be provided by individuals who have a disability. They must be approved by the Department of Education (DOE) and meet existing background screening requirements. The DOE would be tasked with assisting in the development of an appropriate disability curriculum to be used in the school districts.

Under the bill, the DOE would be required to establish and provide support for a disability awareness council. The council is tasked with submitting an annual report and ensuring that instructors meet the requirements specified in the bill.

This bill amends section 1003.4205 of the Florida Statutes.

II. Present Situation:

Disability History and Awareness

According to a U.S. Census Bureau report, one in five United States residents – or around 54 million Americans – reported some level of disability in 2005.<sup>1</sup> Approximately 13 percent of children age 6 to 14 have a disability,<sup>2</sup> and as of 2008, 95 percent of students age 6 to 21 were taught in a general education classroom.<sup>3</sup> According to the Museum of disABILITY History, students:

“benefit from learning about the story of people with disabilities, including how they used to be viewed and treated, how conditions have changed over time and how individuals with disabilities are currently actively involved in self-advocacy and in their communities. Given the context of disability history, students will be equipped with the tools needed to engage in critical thinking and will be more likely to view individuals with disabilities as people deserving of dignity and respect just like everyone else.”<sup>4</sup>

Disability advocates began a campaign to help create understanding and to celebrate the history of individuals with disabilities, and in 2006, West Virginia passed the first Disability History Week bill.<sup>5</sup> Twenty-three other states, including Florida, have since passed similar legislation.<sup>6</sup>

In 2008, the Florida Legislature authorized each district school board to provide disability history and awareness instruction in all K-12 public schools during the first two weeks in October.<sup>7</sup> During “Disability History and Awareness Weeks,” students may be provided with instruction to expand their knowledge, understanding, and awareness of individuals with disabilities and the history of disability and the disability rights movement. The instruction may be integrated into the existing school curriculum and may be taught by qualified school personnel or knowledgeable guest speakers.

The DOE, developed a resource guide to help school districts promote Disability History and Awareness Weeks.<sup>8</sup> The guide includes:

- Promotional ideas to help schools promote disability history and awareness;
- Flyers recognizing the contributions of various individuals with disabilities;
- Disability etiquette documents;

In 2010, the Commissioner was directed to develop recommendations to incorporate instruction regarding autism spectrum disorder, Down syndrome, and other developmental disabilities into continuing education for instructional personnel.<sup>10</sup> The commissioner was instructed to address:

- Early identification of, and intervention for, students who have autism spectrum disorder, Down syndrome, or other developmental disabilities;
- Curriculum planning and curricular and instructional modifications, adaptations, and specialized strategies and techniques;
- The use of available state and local resources;
- The use of positive behavioral supports to deescalate problem behaviors; and
- Appropriate use of manual physical restraint and seclusion techniques.<sup>11</sup>

Governor’s Commission on Disabilities

The Commission was designed, by Executive Order, to “advance public policy for Floridians with disabilities and to provide a forum for advocates representing Floridians with disabilities to develop and voice unified concerns and recommendations.”<sup>12</sup> The Commission made recommendations for strategies to address barriers faced by persons with disabilities in education, employment, transportation, civil rights, health care, and access to technology.<sup>13</sup>

III. Effect of Proposed Changes:

Beginning with the 2013-2014 school year, district school boards would be required to provide disability history awareness and instruction in all K-12 public schools during the first two weeks in October. This instruction is currently an optional activity.

Individuals with disabilities who provide instruction would be approved by the DOE, subject to current statutory background screening requirements.<sup>14</sup> Presumably, the DOE would approve an individual whose expertise is determined by the council.

<sup>14</sup> The bill specifies that these individuals are subject to the requirements in s. 1012.465, F.S., for noninstructional school district employees and contractors who are permitted access on school grounds when students are present, who have direct contact with students, or who have access to or control of school funds. The bill does not prohibit instructional personnel

Under the bill, the DOE would establish and provide support for a disability awareness council, comprised of the Commissioner of Education, a member of the Senate, a member of the House of Representatives, and the Florida Youth council. The council's responsibilities include ensuring that presenters have the requisite expertise and submitting an annual report to the Governor, the presiding officers of the Legislature, and district school superintendents.
