Renovation of existing buildings to create classrooms, laboratories, and vocational training facilities.

c. What direct services will be provided to citizens by the appropriation project?

A career and technical college for youth in Florida's child welfare system. The focus of this project is to target foster youth who can not be placed with traditional foster families or group homes because of mental health, complex trauma, or juvenile justice involvement. Students will reside on campus, receive mental health treatment services, and earn a career certification.

d. Who is the target population served by this project? How many individuals are expected to be served?

The focus of this project is to target foster youth who can not be placed with traditional foster families or group homes because of mental health, complex trauma, or juvenile justice involvement.

e. What is the expected benefit or outcome of this project? What is the methodology by which this outcome will be measured?

Expected outcomes for the citizens of Florida includes a reduced cost of public assistance to support foster youth aging out of the system. Data show a disproportionate rate of homelessness and incarceration. By providing foster youth with a skill, career development, and transition assistance, they become self-sufficient members of society, significantly less reliant on government assistance.

f. What are the suggested penalties that the contracting agency may consider in addition to its standard penalties for failing to meet deliverables or performance measures provided for the contract?

Twin Oaks Juvenile Development has a long history of providing behavioral health, education, and juvenile justice services to the State of Florida. The performance history of these services should instill confidence for support of this request and the ability to provide meaningful services to the citizens of the State of Florida in return.
