I. SUMMARY:

HJR 289 proposes a constitutional amendment requiring that, in addition to the requirement that certain officers reside in the territorial jurisdiction of the office during the term of office, that such persons shall reside within the territorial jurisdiction of the office at the time of qualifying for election or at the time of appointment. The proof of residency requirement would apply to the offices of legislator, state attorney, public defender, and county commissioner. If passed by the Legislature, this constitutional amendment will be submitted to the electors at the November 1998 general election.

This resolution does not appear to have a significant fiscal impact on state or local governments.

II. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS:

A. PRESENT SITUATION:

The Florida Constitution and statutes specify residency requirements for most elected officials. The residency requirements vary depending on the office, but most require that an officer reside within the territorial jurisdiction of the office during the term of office.

B. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

HJR 289 proposes an amendment to the Constitution to require that individuals reside in the territorial jurisdiction of the office at the time of qualifying to run or appointment to the following offices: legislator, state attorney, public defender, and county commissioner. The resolution provides that a person holding elective office who changes residency in order to qualify for a different elective office may not be disqualified from serving in the office currently held. The constitutional amendment proposed by HJR 289 would be presented to electors at the November 1998 general election.

C. APPLICATION OF PRINCIPLES:

No.

(2) any new responsibilities, obligations or work for other governmental or private organizations or individuals?

HJR 289 would require individuals seeking the offices of legislator, state attorney, public defender, or county commissioner to establish residency within the geographic jurisdiction of the office sought prior to qualifying for or being appointed to the office.

(3) any entitlement to a government service or benefit?

No.

b. If an agency or program is eliminated or reduced:
