- (5)

I. SUMMARY:

HB 339 amends Chapter 475, Florida Statutes, to create the "Brokerage Relationship Disclosure Act." This act provides the authorized relationships between real estate brokers and customers and provides the required disclosures for residential real estate transactions relative to each relationship.

The bill removes provisions relating to "disclosed dual agency" and disallows this form of agency for real estate transactions.

II. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS:

A. PRESENT SITUATION:

Chapter 475, Florida Statutes, provides regulation of real estate brokers, salespersons, and schools in this state.

In 1994, the Legislature amended Chapter 475, Florida Statutes, to authorize the transaction broker and disclosed dual agent forms of representation for real estate professionals, in addition to the traditional single agent relationship.

During the 1996 interim, representatives of the Florida Association of Realtors, Florida Real Estate Commission, and the Department of Business & Professional Regulation met in the form of the Real Estate Agency Work Group to develop a solution to the problem of the appropriate relationships between real estate professionals and their customers. This bill reflects the proposal developed by the Real Estate Agency Work Group.

According to section 475.01, Florida Statutes:

A fiduciary is a broker in a relationship of trust and confidence between that broker as agent and the seller or buyer as principal. The duties of the broker as a fiduciary are loyalty, confidentiality, obedience, full disclosure, and accounting and the duty to use skill, care, and diligence;

A single agent is a broker who represents, as a fiduciary, either the buyer or seller but not both in the same transaction;

A disclosed dual agent is a broker who works as an agent for both the buyer and seller. The broker must obtain the informed consent in writing of all parties to the transaction to be a disclosed dual agent. The disclosed dual agent has all the duties of a fiduciary except full disclosure between the buyer and seller.

A transaction broker is a broker who facilitates a brokerage transaction between a buyer and a seller. The transaction broker does not affirmatively represent either the buyer or seller as an agent, and no fiduciary duties exist except for the duty of accounting and the duty to use skill, care, and diligence. However, the transaction broker must treat the buyer and seller with honesty and fairness and must disclose all known facts materially affecting the value of the property in residential transactions to both the buyer and seller. The broker's role as a transaction broker must be fully disclosed in writing to the buyer and seller.

Section 475.02, Florida Statutes, creates the Florida Real Estate Commission (FREC), within the Department of Business & Professional Regulation. Section 475.05, Florida Statutes, permits the FREC to enact rules and decide questions of practice arising in the proceedings before it. The FREC has had difficulty in adopting rules to reflect the intent of the statute regarding the obligations of the real estate professionals under the different forms of authorized relationships. See Rules 61J2-10.036 and 10.037, Florida Administrative Code.

Disclosure requirements for real estate professionals has been an ongoing problem. The duties and obligations of real estate professionals are governed by the common law of agency, as well as by statutes and rules. In Johnson v. Davis, 480 So.2d 625 (Fla. 1985), the court held that where the seller of a home knows of facts materially affecting the value of the property which are not readily observable and are not known to the buyer, the seller is under a duty to disclose them to the buyer. This duty is equally applicable to all forms of real property, new and used. Id. at 629.

B. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

HB 339 creates the "Brokerage Relationship Disclosure Act" within Part I of Chapter 475, Florida Statutes. The bill provides legislative intent to revoke disclosed dual agency as an authorized form of representation by a real estate licensee.

The bill provides definitions of terms, and modifies grounds for discipline by the Florida Real Estate Commission.

Finally, the bill provides for notice of nonrepresentation and for disclosure of authorized brokerage relationships and the corresponding duties of real estate licensees. Disclosure documents must be retained as brokerage business records.

See Section-By-Section Analysis for more specificity.

A definition of principal is added in paragraph (1)(l). A principal means the party with whom a real estate licensee has entered into a single agent relationship.

The definition of transaction broker was revised. A transaction broker means a broker who provides limited representation to a buyer, a seller, or both, in a real estate transaction, but does not represent either in a fiduciary capacity or as a single agent.

C. REDUCTION OF STATE TAX SHARED WITH COUNTIES AND MUNICIPALITIES:

V. COMMENTS:

There is a technical error in the bill on page 15, line 2. The bill provides, "7. Any additional duties that are mutually agreed to by a party." It should provide with a party. This amendment was adopted in the Senate companion.

Section 475.278(1), Florida Statutes, as created in the bill, provides that a licensee may change from one brokerage relationship to the other so long as the "buyer or the seller, or both, gives consent as required by subparagraph (3)(c)2. Subparagraph (3)(c)2 provides for transition disclosure when a licensee changes from a single agent relationship to a transaction brokerage relationship. This does not appear to permit a transition from a seller broker to a buyer broker, or vice versa. However, the statute as drafted, leaves the broker with the option of obtaining the consent of either buyer or seller, or the broker may obtain the consent of both when he or she transitions from a single agent to a transaction broker.
