I. SUMMARY:

The 1989 Legislature created a Taxpayers' Bill of Rights Task Force and charged it with drafting proposed legislation for a Florida Taxpayers' Bill of Rights. In November 1992, Florida voters approved Constitutional amendment #5 which called for a taxpayer bill of rights to set forth taxpayers' rights. The 1992 Legislature enacted s. 213.015, F.S., creating a taxpayer bill of rights containing 15 separate rights. The Legislature adopted most of the Task Force language but omitted some recommendations including the payment of interest on late refunds, the same 5-year statute of limitations for refunds and assessments and the assurance that auditors are not compensated based on the amount of tax assessed or collected.

The bill reduces the statute of limitations for both tax assessments and tax refunds from five to three years. The statute of limitations for an assessment would be four years if the taxpayer makes a substantial underpayment or files a substantially incorrect return.

The bill provides that interest shall be paid on refunds of tax overpayments, taxes paid in error or payment of taxes not due when those refunds have not been paid. Interest shall not commence until 90 days after a complete refund application has been filed. If an audit of the claim is necessary, interest shall not commence until that audit is final. The rate of interest will be the same as the rate currently paid on corporate income tax refunds except that the rate shall not exceed 11%.

The bill provides that the interest applicable to most tax payment deficiencies will be calculated the same way the interest rate applied to corporate income tax delinquencies is currently calculated. This will be the adjusted prime rate and the rate is to be adjusted every six months. Finally, the bill provides that no part of the compensation of any employee or agent of the state performing a tax audit shall be based on the amount of tax assessed or collected as a result of the audit.

The Revenue Estimating Conference concluded that this bill will have a negative fiscal impact or tax revenues of $14.8 M in the 6 months of FY 1998-99 and annualized lost of $72.M thereafter.

II. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS:

A. PRESENT SITUATION:

The 1989 Legislature created a Taxpayers' Bill of Rights Task Force and charged it with drafting proposed legislation for a Florida Taxpayers' Bill of Rights. The Task Force issued its report in May 1990. In November 1992, Florida voters approved Constitutional amendment #5 -- proposed by the Taxation and Budget Reform Commission -- which called for a taxpayer bill of rights to set forth taxpayers' rights and responsibilities and government's responsibilities to deal fairly with taxpayers.

The 1992 Legislature enacted s. 213.015, F.S., creating a taxpayer bill of rights containing 15 separate rights. The Legislature adopted most of the Task Force language but omitted some recommendations including the payment of interest on late refunds, the same 5-year statute of limitations for refunds and assessments and the assurance that auditors are not compensated based on the amount of tax assessed or collected.

Statute of limitations. The statute of limitations for both assessments and refunds is currently five years. Prior to the passage of the sales tax on services and a tax amnesty program in 1987, Florida law contained the same three-year statute of limitations for both audits and refunds. At that time, the limitation for assessments was increased to 5 years while the statute of limitations for refunds remained at three years. The 1994 Legislature increased the limitation on refunds to five years.

Interest on late refunds. Florida taxpayers must pay interest on delinquent tax payments. There is no provision requiring the state to pay taxpayers interest on refunds owed to them that are late, except corporate income taxpayers. The federal government pays interest on late refunds.

Interest rates on delinquent taxes. Interest of 1% a month or 12% a year is applied to most delinquent taxes. The interest rate applied to corporate income taxes is a floating rate tied to the prime rate offered by banks.

B. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

The bill adds four rights to the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights: (1) assurance that no government tax auditor will be paid based on the amount of tax assessed or collected; (2) receive interest when a tax refund is not paid within 90 days; (3) receive market interest rates on delinquent taxes; and the same statute of limitations on assessments and refunds.

D. SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS:

Section 1. Amends s. 95.091(3)(a), F.S., to reduce the statute of limitations on tax assessments from five years to three years. The Department of Revenue and the Department of Business and Professional Regulation would only be able to assess the amount of a tax within three years after the tax is due or within 4 years if the taxpayer makes a substantial underpayment or files a substantially incorrect return.

Section 2. Amends s. 213.105, F.S., to add four rights to the Taxpayers' Bill of Rights:

(16) Assurance that no government tax auditor will be paid based on the amount of tax assessed or collected;

(17) Receive interest when a tax refund is not paid within 90 days;

(18) Market interest rates on delinquent taxes; and

(19) The same statute of limitations on assessments and refunds.

The other sections of the bill implement these four rights.

Section 3. Creates s. 213.235, F.S., to set the interest applicable to tax payment deficiencies at the adjusted prime rate. The rate is to be adjusted every six months. This change extends the same interest rate currently paid on corporate income tax deficiencies to all taxes enumerated in s. 213.05, F.S. Currently, except for the corporate income tax, most taxes carry an interest rate of 1% per month or 12% annually.

Section 4. Creates s. 213.255, F.S., to provide that interest shall be paid on refunds of tax overpayments, taxes paid in error, or payment of taxes not due when those refunds have not been paid. Interest shall not commence until 90 days after a complete refund application has been filed. The section lists the requirements of a complete application. If an audit of the claim is necessary, interest shall not commence until that audit is final. The rate of interest will be the same as the rate paid on delinquent taxes (under Section 3), except that the rate shall not exceed 11%.

Section 5. Effective July 1, 1997, amends s. 213.34(1), F.S., to provide that no part of the compensation of any employee or agent of the state performing a tax audit shall be based on the amount of tax assessed or collected as a result of the audit.

Section 6. Amends s. 215.26(2), F.S., to reduce statute of limitations for application for tax refunds from five years to three years. This section, along with Section 1, will equalize the statute of limitations for both assessments and refunds at three years. This was the case prior to 1987.

Sections 7-12, 14, 23-26, and 31. Amend various sections to provide that the interest due on delinquent taxes be accrued at the rate set forth in section 213.235.

Sections 13, 15-22, and 27-29. Reenact several sections for technical purposes.

Section 30. Amends s. 220.807, F.S., to provide that the interest rate applicable to delinquent corporate income taxes shall be calculated pursuant to s. 213.235, F.S. This does not change the way interest on corporate income tax delinquencies is calculated, it moves the language from the corporate income tax chapter (220) to the general taxation chapter (213).

Section 32. Effective July 1, 1997, provides that the Department of Revenue shall report to the Legislature by January 1, 1998, with recommendations for the efficient implementation of this act and methods to minimize its fiscal impact.

Section 33. Except as otherwise provided, provides an effective date of January 1, 1999.
