I. SUMMARY:

HB 1133 would give water management districts (WMDs) the option to advertise in area newspapers, rather than in the Florida Administrative Weekly, staff meetings to evaluate and rank bids for goods or services. Being able to use newspapers as the advertising medium is expected to speed up the WMDs' contracting process.

The bill has an indeterminate fiscal impact.

HB 1133 would take effect July 1, 1999.

II. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS:

A. PRESENT SITUATION:

The WMDs, as do other governmental agencies in Florida, enter into contracts for certain kinds of services by utilizing the Request for Proposal (RFP) method. Agency staff develop a document (the RFP) which identifies the problem to be solved, outlines the service objectives required, and specifies any technical requirements which must be complied with. Some agencies send out RFPs to those individuals or businesses which are known to be capable of providing the services desired; other agencies advertise their RFPs in newspapers or the Florida Administrative Weekly (FAW), a magazine (in print and on-line versions) published by the Department of State. Typically, an agency will appoint a team of employees familiar with the subject of the RFP to informally review the bid proposals to determine whether each potential provider complied with the terms of the RFP, to reject those bids which are not responsive to the RFP, and to analyze and rank remaining bids based upon criteria outlined in the RFP and to organize the results of the evaluation to identify top bidders. The bid itself is awarded by the head of the agency -- in the case of a WMD, the governing board.

A 1981 Florida Attorney General's Opinion (AGO 081-51) concluded that the meetings of RFP evaluation teams were not subject to Florida's "Government in the Sunshine Law," s. 286.11, F.S., requiring notification of meetings between public officials in the course of their official duties. Citing a lack of statutory or judicial guidance about whether a team of government staff rises to the level of an "official board or commission," the AGO concluded:

"To say otherwise would lead to the absurd result that nearly every meeting of 2 or more government employees at which some foreseeable agency action is discussed would be open to the public and could only be held after complying with the Sunshine Law's notice requirements. Such requirements would cripple the efficient operation of government and bring the conduct of the public's business to a virtual standstill. I cannot believe that the Sunshine Law was meant to cover such meetings. As the court stated in the case of Bennett v. Warden, (333 So.2d 97, 99 (2 D.C.A. Fla., 1976):

... frequent and unpublicized meetings between an executive officer and advisors, consultants, staff or personnel under his direction, for the purpose of 'fact-finding' to assist him in the execution of those duties, are not meetings within the contemplation of the Sunshine Law. Any other conclusion, carried to its logical extension, would in our view unduly hamper the efficient operation of modern government the administration of which is more and more being placed in the hands of professional administrators. It would be unrealistic, indeed intolerable, to require of such professionals that every meeting, every contact, and every discussion with anyone from whom they would seek counsel or consultation to assist in acquiring the necessary information, data or intelligence needed to advise or guide the authority by whom they are employed, be a public meeting within the disciplines of the Sunshine Law. Neither the letter nor the spirit of the law require it."

Sixteen years after AGO 081-51, the Third District Court of Appeals ruled the opposite. In Silver Express Company, etc. vs. the District Board of Lower Tribunal Trustees of Miami-Dade Community College, the district court ruled that the deliberations of the community college's purchasing committee on a flight-instruction contract should have been open to the public, because the committee's recommendations had played a significant role in the board of trustees' ultimate decision. The ruling cited Spillis Candela & Partners, Inc. v. Centrust Savings Bank, 535 So.2d 694 (Fla. 3d DCA 1988):

"The law is quite clear. An ad hoc advisory board, even if its power is limited to making recommendations to a public agency and even if it possesses no authority to bind the agency in any way, is subject to the Sunshine Law. The committee here, made a ruling affecting the decision-making process and it was of significance. As a result, it was improper for the committee to reach its recommendation in private since that constituted a violation of the Sunshine Law."

Section 286.011(1), F.S., (1), specifies that, "all meetings of any board or commission of any state agency or authority or of any agency or authority of any county, municipal corporation, or political subdivision, except as otherwise provided in the Constitution, at which official acts are to be taken are declared to be public meetings open to the public at all times, and no resolution, rule, or formal action shall be considered binding except as taken or made at such meeting. The board or commission must provide reasonable notice of all such meetings." Although this section of law doesn't require advertising every public meeting in the FAW, state, regional and some local governmental agencies prefer to advertise in that medium.

Publication deadlines for material submitted to the FAW can be three to four weeks in advance of the actual meeting; depending on the newspaper, the advertising deadline may be seven to 10 days. The South Florida WMD, which is supporting HB 1133, has said the FAW deadlines have slowed its contracting process. As an example, the South Florida WMD solicited 40 RFPs from contractors in 1998. In 27 of those 40 RFPs, the staff workshop to evaluate the bids was delayed for reasons that included the need to advertise addendums to the original RFPs. In such cases, the staff advertised its second or even third meeting in the FAW, adding several weeks onto the eventual project.

B. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

HB 1133 would allow a WMD to advertise staff meetings to evaluate bids, RFPs or other solicitations in a newspaper of general paid circulation in the county where its principal office is located, or in the county or counties where the public work will be performed, no less than seven days prior to the meeting.
