I. SUMMARY:

Provides that the running of time under the statute of limitations is tolled by fraudulent concealment of a cause of action or the identity of the person to be sued. Sets forth specific legislative intent that the bill is intended to be remedial in nature.

This bill has no fiscal impact on the court system.

II. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS:

A. PRESENT SITUATION:

Statute of limitations: Black's Law Dictionary defines statute of limitations as: "... legislative enactments that prescribe the periods within which certain rights may be enforced." Black's Law Dictionary, 835 (5th ed., 1979). The Florida Statutes address statutes of limitation in chapter 95. Section 95.051, F.S. specifically provides the conditions which will toll, or temporarily suspend, the statute of limitations:

- Absence from the state of the person to be sued.
- Use by the person to be sued of a false name that is unknown to the person entitled to sue so that process cannot be served on the person to be sued.
- Concealment in the state of the person to be sued so that process cannot be served.
- The adjudicated incapacity, before the cause of action accrued, of the person entitled to sue.
- Voluntary payments by the alleged father of the child in paternity actions during the time of payments.
- The payment of any part of the principal or interest of any obligation or liability founded on a written instrument.
- The pendency of any arbitral proceeding pertaining to a dispute that is the subject of the action.
- The minority or previously adjudicated incapacity of the person entitled to sue during any period of time in which a parent, guardian, or guardian ad litem does not exist, has an adverse interest to the person entitled to sue, or is adjudicated incapacitated themselves.

Subsection (2) of s. 95.051, F.S., specifically states that no other reason shall toll the running of any statute of limitations, except those specified in s. 95.051, the Florida Probate Code, or the Florida Guardianship Law.

Fraudulent concealment: In order to establish fraudulent concealment sufficient to toll the statute of limitations, the plaintiff must show both successful concealment of the cause of action and a fraudulent means to achieve that concealment. S.A.P. v. State, Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, 704 So.2d 583 at 585 (Fla. 1st DCA, 1997). Prior to the enactment of s. 95.051(2), F.S., the Florida Supreme Court held that the fraudulent concealment of an injury would toll the running of the statute of limitations, or would serve as an exception to the statute of limitations. Proctor v. Schomberg, 63 So.2d 68 (Fla. 1953). Since the Court's holding in Proctor, the Legislature enacted legislation that allowed the statutes of limitations in medical malpractice actions to be extended forward 2 years from the time that the injury is discovered, or should have been discovered with the exercise of due diligence, if it can be shown that fraud, concealment, or intentional misrepresentation of fact prevented the discovery of the injury. 95.11(4)(b), F.S. This exception to the statute of limitations is limited to medical malpractice actions only.

Florida courts have consistently held that fraudulent concealment tolls the statute of limitations in cases other than medical malpractice. In S.A.P. v. the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, the First District Court of Appeal held that "as a general rule, fraudulent concealment constitutes an implied exception to the statute of limitations, postponing commencement of the running of the statute until discovery of reasonable opportunity of discovery of the concealment by the owner of the cause of action." S.A.P. at 585. In the S.A.P. case, fraudulent concealment was held to toll the four-year statute of limitations for tort actions brought against state agencies pursuant to the waiver of sovereign immunity provisions found at s. 768.28, F.S. Similarly, the Fourth District Court of Appeal has held that the tolling for fraudulent concealment in no way affects the legislature's determination that the state only be liable up to the limits set forth in the waiver of sovereign immunity statute. Vargas v. Glades General Hospital, 566 So.2d 282 at 285 (Fla. 4th DCA, 1990).

However, the Florida Supreme Court recently held that statutes of limitations for civil actions are NOT tolled by the fraudulent concealment of the identity of the defendant. Fulton County Administrator v. Sullivan, 1997 WL 589312 (Fla.) The Court made its decision based on rules of statutory construction: that legislative intent is the polestar by which the court is guided, and intent should be gleaned from the plain language of the statute. In statutes of limitation specifically, courts will not find exceptions when the Legislature has refused to do so. Fulton County Administrator at 3, citing Carey v. Beyer, 75 So.2d 217 (Fla. 1954). Because section 95.051, F.S. does not specifically allow the statute of limitations to be tolled for fraudulent concealment, the Court opined that "in the face of such clear legislative direction, we are compelled to hold that fraudulent concealment ... will not toll the statute of limitations.” Id at 3. In fact, the Court recommended that the legislature examine this issue, and should it agree, enact an amendment to the statute to avoid another unfair result. Id at 4.

B. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

HB 2095, in response to the Supreme Court’s request in the Fulton County Administrator case, clearly enumerates legislative intent to recognize the “court-made” tolling provision for fraudulent concealment of a cause of action or identity of a person to be sued. The bill amends section 95.051, F.S., to include fraudulent concealment of a cause of action or the identity of a person to be sued as specific conditions which will toll, or suspend, the statute of limitations. Lastly, the bill sets forth that the intent is remedial in nature, and is intended to clarify existing law.

Remedial statutes are statutes relating to modes of procedure which confirm rights already existing, and as such, do not come within the general rule against retrospective application. City of Lakeland v. Catinella, 129 So.2d 133 (Fla. 1961). HB 2095 specifically states that the amendment to section 95.051, F.S. is remedial in nature; thus, the tolling provisions provided by the bill would apply to causes of action already existing.
