I. SUMMARY:

HB 315 amends the statutory definition of "discount in the usual course of business" to allow wine and spirit wholesalers to offer discounts, in addition to discounts based on volume, based on the license series held by the retailer.

The bill has no impact on state revenue.

The act will take effect upon becoming a law.

II. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS:

A. PRESENT SITUATION:

The alcoholic beverage industry is characterized by the strict separation between suppliers/manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers. Federal and state law restrict the business relationship between the three tiers. This body of law is collectively known as "Tied House Evil" and is designed to prevent the earlier social evils which were associated with manufacturers owning and operating their own retail establishments [houses], to prevent monopolistic practices and to establish the framework for an comprehensive regulatory system. Basic Tied House prohibitions are located in s. 561.42, Florida Statutes.

Section 561.42, Florida Statutes, prohibits a manufacturer or distributor from having any direct or indirect financial interest in a retail license and also prohibits any gift or loan of money or property and the giving of rebates, credit for the purchase of beverages is restricted, advertising relationships are limited, etc. Subsection (6) does allow the giving of trade discounts "in the usual course of business" on wine and liquor sales. Subsection (10) of s. 561.01, Florida Statutes, provides a definition for the term "discount in the usual course of business" and allows a cash discount or a wine or spirits merchandise discount [buy X cases and get X free] and requires the discount to be offered to all retailers buying similar quantities

Division rule 61A-4.0461, FAC, sets forth criteria for determining what are allowable transactions, and provides that discounts shall be considered unlawful financial aide unless:

- (a) The discount is a cash discount given simultaneously at the time of sale;
- (b) The same discount is offered to all vendors buying similar quantities in any one business day;
- (c) The discount is related to a single transaction; and
- (d) In the case of malt beverage sales all of the quantity of malt beverage required to be purchased in order to qualify for the discount is delivered to a single location.

Recent discussions between various segments of the industry and the Division of Alcoholic Beverages and Tobacco revealed some confusion regarding the ability of both beer and wine and spirit wholesalers to offer discounts based on whether the account was for "on-premise" or "off-premise" consumption. Much of this confusion apparently stemmed from a legal memorandum attached as part of Industry Bulletin 93-36 relating to Malt Beverage Price Differentials as set forth in Rule 61A-4.013, FAC. That interpretation acknowledges that some transactions impose additional costs on the distributor which can be passed through to the retailer, e.g. cash/credit sales, without being an unlawful assist. These pass-through costs are characterized as price differentials. The memo appears to permit a price differential between on-premise and off-premise accounts.

After considerable discussion, the Division's review of this issue, as found in Industry Bulletins 98-05 and 98-06, concluded that any discount, other than a discount based on volume, was a violation of law. Recognizing, however, that a more flexible pricing practice was now common throughout the industry, the extreme difficulty with immediate compliance industry-wide, and in an effort to allow the industry an opportunity for legislative redress of this issue, Division Industry Bulletin 98-09 which was issued on December 21, 1998, stayed enforcement until July 1, 1999.

B. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

This legislation will allow wine and spirits wholesalers to offer discounts, in addition to discounts which are based on volume as authorized under existing law, to retailers which operate under the same license series.

The Beverage Law contains numerous alcoholic beverage license classifications within classifications. For example a 4-COP license series allows the sale of beer, wine and spirits for consumption on the licensed premises [COP]. However, within that series you may find a number of license types, e.g. 4-COP Quota License [which allows COP and package sales] or 4-COP SRX [a special restaurant license which is restricted to COP sales only].

V. COMMENTS:

"Pool buying groups" are authorized by Section 561.14(3), Florida Statutes, and 61A-3.0305, FAC and are comprised of licensed alcoholic beverage retailers, one of which is designated as the "buying agent." Pool buying groups are formed in order to purchase in bulk quantities and thereby qualify for discounts which otherwise would not be offered to the retailer. Pool buying groups may be made up of various license series. This legislation may not adequately address the particular dynamics of all pool buying groups.
