II. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS:

A. PRESENT SITUATION:

Civil Liability For Noise Pollution

The right to enjoy one's property without interference from others was brought to this country with the common law and has long been recognized by the Florida Supreme Court:

An owner or occupant of property must use it in a way that will not be a nuisance to other owners and occupants in the same community. Anything which annoys or disturbs one in the free use, possession, or enjoyment of his property or which renders its ordinary use or occupation physically uncomfortable may become a nuisance and may be restrained.

Knowles v. Central Allapattae Properties, Inc., 145 Fla. 123, 130 (1940), quoting Mercer v. Keynton, 121 Fla. 87 (1935). The courts, also, have recognized that the remedy for annoying noise is properly found in a claim for nuisance.

That mere noise may be so great at certain times and under certain circumstances as to amount to an actionable nuisance and entitle the party subjected to it to the preventive remedy of the court of equity is thoroughly established. The reason why a certain amount of noise is or may be a nuisance is that it is not only disagreeable but it also wears upon the nervous system and produces that feeling which we call 'tired.' That the subjection of a human being to a continued hearing of loud noises tends to shorten life, I think, is beyond all doubt. Another reason is that mankind needs both rest and sleep, and noise tends to prevent both. [cites omitted]

Rae v. Flynn, 690 So. 2d 1341, n.1 (Fla. 3rd DCA 1997).

Criminal Liability For Noise Pollution

The state is free to create laws regulating the level and location of noise. For example, s. 403.031, F.S., defines noise as pollution which may be regulated by the state for the general health and welfare of its citizens. Section 403.415, F.S., defines Florida's Motor Vehicle Noise Prevention Act which regulates automobile, and road construction, noise levels affecting residential areas. Similarly, state departments and agencies may promulgate rules affecting the environment. See, s. 20.255, F.S.

The state, also, may impose criminal sanctions for noise pollution. For example, s. 316.65, F.S., permits a misdemeanor conviction for loud automobile or marine mufflers. It also permits counties to adopt more stringent noise control ordinances.

Finally, local governments have the authority to pass ordinances regulating the protection of their air quality, to include noise pollution. See, s. 125.01, F.S.; and e.g., Easy Way of Lee County, Inc. v. Lee County, 674 So. 2d 863 (Fla. 2nd DCA 1996). These ordinances may also impose criminal sanctions. See, e.g., M.C. v. State, 695 So. 2d 477 (Fla. 3rd DCA 1997).

Civil Liability For Injuries

A tort, as defined by Black's Law Dictionary, is "A private or civil wrong or injury ... for which the court will provide a remedy in the form of an action for damages." For example, all automobile owners have a duty to maintain their vehicles and obey the traffic laws. If a particular driver's failure to stop at a red light results in his striking a pedestrian, then the pedestrian may recover damages from the driver for his medical bills and lost wages for breaching the duty to stop at all red lights. Similarly, merchants who invite people to enter upon their premises in order to profit from them, have an even higher duty to maintain their premises so that their customers do not slip and fall, or have merchandise fall onto their heads.

Conversely, college football players (ordinarily) may not sue their alma maters for an injury received while playing the game because the risks undertaken by the player are so obvious and inherent in the sport, that it must be understood the player accepted those risks when he chose to play the game.

B. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

The bill relieves sport shooting ranges from civil and criminal liability for any claim of noise pollution, if the range was in compliance with any noise control laws or ordinances applicable to the range at the time of construction and initial operation, and the range experienced no substantial change in the nature of use.
