and insert in lieu thereof: competition in the communications industry. Disclosure of data prepared by or in the possession of a local government which reveals the type and size of facilities for providing telecommunications services creates a competitive disadvantage for the local government and an unfair advantage for its competitors. Competitors can use such information to impair full and fair competition and impede competition in the telecommunications marketplace to the disadvantage of the consumers of telecommunications services. Thus, the public and private harm in disclosing this information significantly outweighs any public benefit derived from disclosure, and the public's ability to scrutinize and monitor agency action is not diminished by non disclosure of this information.
