I. Summary:

This bill caps the annual compensation of state university presidents to $225,000 from public funds. The bill excludes compensation from nonpublic sources from the $225,000 cap, but prohibits the state from incurring any obligation to cover any deficiency occasioned by a shortfall in nonpublic funds.

II. Present Situation:

Under the school code rewrite (chapter 2002-387, L.O.F.), a university board of trustees approves the annual compensation of a state university president. Annual compensation has dramatically increased within the past year. According to unverified survey data provided by the state universities, the university boards of trustees have awarded annual compensation to their respective university presidents as follows:

University of Florida (36 percent increase in salary)

Unless otherwise indicated through the designation of the terms “Foundation” or “Direct-Support Organization,” all obligations are funded through state dollars.

III. Effect of Proposed Changes:

The bill caps the annual remuneration of state university presidents to $225,000 from public funds. The bill defines the following terms for purposes of determining the cap:

- “Remuneration” is defined as salary, bonuses, and cash-equivalent compensation paid to a state university president by his employer for work performed, excluding health insurance benefits and retirement benefits.
- “Public funds” are defined as funds appropriated from the General Revenue Fund, funds appropriated from state trust funds, tuition and fees, or any funds from a state university trust fund regardless of repository.
- “Cash-equivalent compensation” is defined as any benefit that may be assigned equivalent cash value.

Currently, only three institutions satisfy the cap: University of West Florida, University of North Florida, and New College. New College would be subject to the cap through s. 1001.21(6), F.S., which defines New College, except as otherwise specifically provided, as a state university.

Payments and benefits received from a university foundation or a university direct-support organization would not be subject to the $225,000 cap. A party may provide compensation to a state university president from nonpublic funds. However, the state may not assume any third party obligation to compensate university presidents if the third party fails in its obligation to make payment to a state university president.

The bill retains compensation, as that term is defined in s. 121.022(22), F.S., for purposes of calculating benefits under the Florida Retirement System (FRS). Section 121.022(22), F.S., specifically excludes bonuses and other payments received under a faculty practice plan in determining compensation under FRS.

The bill is prospective in application and shall take effect upon becoming a law.

IV. Constitutional Issues:

A. Municipality/County Mandates Restrictions:

None.

B. Public Records/Open Meetings Issues:

None.

C. Trust Funds Restrictions:

None.

V. Economic Impact and Fiscal Note:

A. Tax/Fee Issues:

None.

B. Private Sector Impact:

To the extent that state university presidents are not compensated from public funds, private sector sources may be required to fund the compensation of university presidents to continue to attract qualified individuals.

C. Government Sector Impact:

The bill may provide a positive fiscal impact to state revenues by limiting state obligations to fund university president salaries upon completion of current contracts.

VI. Technical Deficiencies:

None.

VII. Related Issues:

Section 401(a)(17) of the United States Internal Revenue Code sets maximum compensation limits for the calculation of benefits from an approved, tax-qualified defined benefit pension plan. The Florida Retirement System (FRS) adheres to these requirements through s.121.30, F.S. and permits exceptions to the Code's section 415(b) maximum benefit payments through adherence to s. 121.1001, F.S. For FRS members employed prior to July 1, 1996, the maximum compensation limit is $294,620; for employment after that date the limit is $200,000. Employer payroll contributions cease when those compensation limits are met.

A consequence of this federal limit is that there may be greater retirement contributions paid to university presidents even when the salary amount is lower than for others solely based on the date of first hire. This could produce an anomalous situation in which a nominally higher salaried president actually receives a lower state benefit upon retirement.

VIII. Amendments:

None.
