Constitution. Section 3. The Legislature finds that it is a public necessity that the public records exemption found in s. 409.175(16), Florida Statutes, be expanded to include medical records and certain information regarding foster parent applicants, as well as information regarding a foster parent applicant's spouse, child, and other adult household members, in order to protect information of a sensitive personal nature. Public access to such records could cause harm or embarrassment to an individual and constitutes an unwarranted invasion into an individual's life and personal privacy. The harm from disclosing medical records outweighs any public benefit that can be derived from public access to such records. The Legislature also finds that the public records exemption for medical records is a public necessity because matters of personal health are traditionally private and confidential concerns between a patient and a health care provider. The private and confidential nature of personal health matters pervades both the public and private health care sectors. Furthermore, the public availability of medical records could lessen the willingness of prospective caregivers to reveal medical information, thus hindering the department's ability to assess foster parent applicants and licensed foster parents and hindering the department's attempts to make appropriate placements for foster children. The Legislature further finds that it is a public necessity to provide foster parent applicants with the same public records exemption afforded licensed foster parents under s. 409.175(16), Florida Statutes, in order to encourage persons to apply to become licensed foster parents. The public availability of such information regarding foster parent applicants could have a negative, chilling effect on the recruitment of such persons. Accordingly, the public records exemption for such applicant information and for medical records is a public necessity for the effective and efficient operation of the foster care program.

Section 4. This act shall take effect upon becoming a law.
