I. Summary:

This bill amends s. 944.279, F.S., which subjects an inmate to Department of Corrections disciplinary proceedings if a court finds that the inmate filed an action or appeal in bad faith or knowingly presented false information or evidence to the court. The bill removes an exception that prevents application of the sanction to a collateral criminal proceeding filed by an inmate.

This bill substantially amends s. 944.279 of the Florida Statutes:

II. Present Situation:

Section 944.279, F.S., was enacted in 1996 as part of an act aimed at reducing unnecessary or frivolous prisoner filings. The section provides for notification of the department if a Florida state court or a federal court determines that a prisoner has either: (1) filed a frivolous or malicious suit, action, claim, proceeding, or appeal; or (2) knowingly, or with reckless disregard for the truth, brought false information or evidence before the court. If the court makes such a written finding, it may direct that a certified copy be directed to the correctional institution for the department to take disciplinary action pursuant to its administrative rules. However, the statute includes an exception stating that it does not apply to criminal proceedings or collateral criminal proceedings.

Rule 33-601.311(9-32), F.A.C., tracks the statutory language and provides a maximum penalty of 60 days disciplinary confinement and loss of all gain time if a court makes the required finding of prisoner misconduct.

In Hall v. State, 752 So.2d 575 (Fla. 2000), the Florida Supreme Court noted that the term “collateral criminal proceeding” is not defined in the statute and that there is no definition of the term in Black's Law Dictionary. However, the Court found that a postconviction motion filed pursuant to Rule 3.850, Florida Rules of Criminal Procedure, and any appeal of such a motion, are collateral criminal proceedings. In Saucer v. State, 779 So.2d 261 (Fla. 2001), the Court held that a writ of habeas corpus that challenges the prisoner's criminal conviction or sentence is also considered to be a collateral criminal proceeding.

Section 944.28(2)(a), F.S., provides separate authority for the department to forfeit all or part of any gain time earned by an inmate if he or she is found by a court to have brought a frivolous suit, action, claim, proceeding, or appeal in any court. The department may also forfeit all gain time of an inmate who is found by a court to have brought false information or evidence before the court either knowingly or with reckless disregard for the truth. There is no exception for collateral criminal proceedings.

In Hall, the Court held that the two sections must be read together and cannot be read independently. It found that the exception for collateral criminal proceedings applies to both statutes. Therefore, gain time cannot be revoked if the underlying action was a collateral criminal proceeding.

III. Effect of Proposed Changes:

The bill will remove the current exception that prevents the Department of Corrections from taking disciplinary action, including revocation of gain time, against a prisoner who is found by a court to have brought a collateral criminal proceeding in bad faith or to have presented false information or evidence before the court in such a proceeding.

IV. Constitutional Issues:

A. Municipality/County Mandates Restrictions:

None.

B. Public Records/Open Meetings Issues:

None.

C. Trust Funds Restrictions:

None.

V. Economic Impact and Fiscal Note:

A. Tax/Fee Issues:

None.

B. Private Sector Impact:

None.

C. Government Sector Impact:

There is no quantifiable impact, but there will be a reduction of use of judicial and prosecutorial resources if the extension of s. 944.279, F.S., to cover collateral criminal proceedings, deters frivolous filings by prisoners.

VI. Technical Deficiencies:

None.

VII. Related Issues:
