SUMMARY ANALYSIS

This bill originates from a Senate staff interim project finding that over time, the statute of limitations applicable to criminal prosecutions has become somewhat disorganized and confusing because it has been amended "piecemeal" over the years. Consequently, the general time limitation periods are interspersed with various exceptions, extensions, and "administrative" provisions that are not necessarily in any given order.

This bill reorganizes and clarifies the statute of limitations applicable to criminal prosecutions. The provisions of this bill are technical and clarifying, not substantive.

This bill does not appear to have a fiscal impact on state or local governments.

This document does not reflect the intent or official position of the bill sponsor or House of Representatives. STORAGE NAME: h1713.CRJU.doc 3/14/2005

I. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS

A. HOUSE PRINCIPLES ANALYSIS:

Provide less government -- This bill simplifies the law.

B. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

Section 775.15, F.S., sets forth time limitations for commencing criminal prosecutions, commonly known as the "statute of limitations." The purpose of the statute of limitations for a criminal prosecution is to protect people from being indefinitely threatened by possible criminal prosecution. State v. Hickman, 189 So.2d 254 (Fla. 2nd DCA 1966), cert. denied, 194 So.2d 618 (1966).

Florida's statute of limitations contains general time limitation periods as well as various exceptions and extensions to the general limitation periods. It also contains "administrative" provisions which lay the groundwork for determining when an offense is committed and when a prosecution is commenced.

Subsections (1) and (2) of s. 775.15, F.S., control the time limitations for initiating a criminal prosecution for most offenses. Generally, the length of the time periods under the statute increase with the severity of the offense as follows:

- For a capital felony, a life felony, or a felony resulting in death, there is no time limitation.
- For a first or second degree felony violation of s. 794.011, F.S., which includes several different sexual battery offenses, if reported to a law enforcement agency within 72 hours after commission of the crime, there is no time limitation.
- For a first degree felony sexual battery violation upon a victim less than 18 years of age (regardless of whether a victim reports it to law enforcement), there is no time limitation.
- For the crime of perjury in an official proceeding that relates to the prosecution of a capital felony, there is no time limitation.
- For a felony resulting in injury to a person when the felony arises from the use of a "destructive device," there is a ten-year time limitation.
- For prosecutions involving felony securities transaction violations, insurance fraud, and Medicaid provider fraud under ch. 517, F.S., s. 409.920, F.S., s. 440.105, F.S., and s. 817.234, F.S., there is a five-year time limitation.
- For prosecutions involving environmental control felony violations under ch. 403, F.S., there is a five-year time limitation from the date of the violation discovery.
- For prosecutions involving felony elderly person abuse or disabled adult abuse under s. 825.102, F.S., or s. 825.103, F.S., there is a five-year time period.
- For a first degree felony, there is a four-year time limitation.
- For any other felony, there is a three-year time limitation.
- For a first degree misdemeanor, there is a two-year time limitation.

For a second degree misdemeanor or a noncriminal violation, there is a one-year time limitation.

Subsection (3) of s. 775.15, F.S., extends these otherwise applicable time limitation periods up to three years for any offense involving a material element of fraud or breach of fiduciary duty, within one year after discovery of the offense by an aggrieved party or his or her legal representative.

These general time limitation periods are also extended in subsections (7) and (8) of s. 775.15, F.S., for prosecutions involving certain sexual offenses when committed against children or when DNA evidence is gathered in those cases. Specifically, subsection (7), provides that the applicable time limitation for prosecutions involving certain sexual crimes (sexual battery, "statutory rape" under former s. 794.05, F.S., lewd or lascivious offenses, or incest) against children under 18 years of age does not begin to run until the crime is reported to a law enforcement agency or to another governmental agency or until the child turns 18, whichever occurs first.

Thus under subsection (7), if someone commits a second degree felony sexual battery on a 14 year old child, the normal three-year time limitation period does not begin to run until that child turns 18 years of age, or until he or she reports the crime, whichever occurs earlier. s. 775.15(7), F.S. See also, Constantine v. State, 566 So.2d 321, 322 (2nd DCA 1990).

Subsection (8) of s. 775.15, F.S., allows prosecution for sexual battery under ch. 794, F.S., or lewd or lascivious offenses under s. 800.04, F.S., or s. 825.1025, F.S., to begin one year after the date on which the identity of the accused is or should have been established through DNA evidence. This oneyear period is in addition to any other authorized time limitation period. The delayed prosecution is authorized only if due diligence is used in the identification of a defendant through the analysis of DNA evidence and if a sufficient portion of the evidence collected during the original investigation and then tested is preserved and available for testing by the accused.

Section 775.15(4), F.S., provides that time for prosecution of a criminal case starts to run on the day after the offense is committed. An offense is deemed to have been committed either when every element of the offense has occurred, or, if the legislative purpose to prohibit a continuing course of conduct plainly appears, at the time when the course of conduct or the defendant's duplicity therein is terminated.

Subsection (5) of this section provides that prosecution on a criminal charge on which the defendant has already been arrested or served with a summons is commenced when the indictment, information, or other charging document is filed. This is also true when the defendant has not previously been arrested or served with a summons, except the capias, summons, or other process issued on the indictment or information must be executed without unreasonable delay.

If an indictment or information is filed within the appropriate time period and it is dismissed or set aside because of a defect in its content or form after the applicable time period has elapsed, the time period for commencing prosecution will be extended three months from when the indictment or information was dismissed or set aside.

The statute of limitations is tolled under s. 775.15(6), F.S., when the defendant is continuously absent from the state or has no reasonably ascertainable place of abode or work within the state. This provision does not extend the otherwise applicable period of limitation beyond three years. It is also not intended to limit the prosecution of a defendant unless the defendant has been timely charged by indictment, information, or other charging document and has not been arrested due to a voluntary absence from the state or has not been extradited for prosecution from another state.

Over time, the statute of limitations has become somewhat disorganized and confusing because it has been amended "piecemeal" over the years, with no real attempt to restructure the statute to logically group these amendments with existing provisions. The general time limitation periods are interspersed with various exceptions, extensions, and "administrative" provisions that are not necessarily in any given order. The statute would be easier to understand and more "user friendly" to prosecutors and ordinary citizens if it were reorganized into a more logical and understandable format.

Effect of Bill

This BILL makes the criminal statute of limitations, s. 775.15, F.S., easier to understand and more "user friendly" to practitioners and ordinary citizens by reorganizing it into a more logical and understandable format.

This BILL groups the general time limitation periods together, followed by the "administrative" provisions such as when an offense is committed and when a prosecution is commenced. The various exceptions and extensions to the general time limitation periods are the final subsections in the statute. This reorganization makes only technical and clarifying in nature; no changes are substantive.

This BILL also conform a cross reference in s. 922.105, F.S.

C. SECTION DIRECTORY:

Section 1 amends s. 775.15, F.S., reorganizing the time limitations for prosecution of a criminal offense.

Section 2 amends s. 922.105, F.S., to correct a cross-reference to s. 775.15, F.S.

Section 3 provides an effective date of July 1, 2005.
