Public Records Laws

Article I, s. 24(a), Fla. Const., expresses Florida's public policy regarding access to government records as follows:

Every person has the right to inspect or copy any public records made or received in connection with the official business of any public body, officer, or employee of the state, or persons acting on their behalf, except with respect to records exempted pursuant to this section or specifically made confidential by this Constitution. This section specifically includes the legislative, executive, and judicial branches of government and each agency or department created thereunder; counties, municipalities, and districts; and each constitutional officer, board, and commission, or entity created pursuant to law or this Constitution.

Section 119.01(1), F.S., provides:

It is the policy of this state that all state, county, and municipal records shall be open for personal inspection by any person.

Article I, s. 24(c), Fla. Const., provides that the Legislature may, by general law, provide exemptions from these requirements. The general law must state with specificity the public necessity justifying the exemption, and must be no broader than necessary to accomplish its purpose.

Passage of Public Records Exemptions

In 2002, HJR 327 was proposed by Representative Carassas and others. HJR 327 amended art. I, s. 24, Fla. Const., to require a two-thirds vote of each house in order to enact an exemption to the requirement that public meetings be open to the public or that a public record be open to copying and inspection.

The joint resolution was approved at the general election in November 2002, and became effective in January 2003.

Thus, this bill must receive a 2/3 vote of each house to be enacted.

The bill creates public records exemptions for:

- Security/Identification: exempts from public records all user identifications and passwords used by the division and commission to limit unauthorized access to the electronic filing system; and
- Draft Reports/Files: exempts all reports and files stored in the electronic system until such time as the reports have been submitted as filed.

The bill also provides for automatic repeal of the exemption in s. 112.32156, F.S., on October 2, 2010, unless reenacted by the Legislature.

If enacted by a two-thirds vote of each chamber, the bill takes effect upon becoming law, provided that HB 1849 or similar legislation creating the electronic filing system is also enacted into law.

Article I, s. 24(a), Fla. Const., sets forth the state's public policy regarding access to government records. The section guarantees every person a right to inspect or copy any public record of the legislative, executive, and judicial branches of government.

The Legislature may, however, provide by general law for the exemption of records and meetings from the requirements of Art. I, s. 24, Fla. Const. The general law must state with specificity the public necessity justifying the exemption (public necessity statement) and must be no broader than necessary to accomplish its purpose.
