I. Summary:

The bill revises the Department of Health's duties relating to the Area Health Education Center (AHEC) network in Florida. The Department in cooperation with medical schools located in Florida which form the area health education center network, shall maintain and evaluate, rather than organize the network. The network is to focus on improving access to health services by persons who are medically underserved.

The Department of Health must contract with medical schools to assist in funding the AHEC network, which links the provision of primary care services to medically underserved populations with the education of medical students, interns, and residents. The requirement for the AHEC network to be coordinated with and under contract with the state-approved medical schools is deleted.

The bill establishes requirements for the AHEC network relating to students in the health care professions and health care providers serving medically underserved populations. The Department of Health must make every effort to assure that the network, rather than participating medical schools, does not discriminate among enrollees with respect to age, race, sex, or health status.

The bill deletes reference to specific federal grant programs.

The bill revises the duties of the Office of Rural Health within the Department of Health. The Office will coordinate with the federal government to designate health professional shortage areas, recommend foreign physicians for visa waivers, document health care professionals working in the public interest, and to place professionals using the federally funded recruitment incentive programs.

This bill amends section 381.0402 and 381.0405, Florida Statutes.

II. Present Situation:

Area Health Education Centers link the resources of university health science centers with local planning, educational and clinical resources. An AHEC network of health-related institutions provides multidisciplinary educational services to students, faculty and local practitioners, ultimately improving health care delivery in medically underserved areas.

The AHEC program is a long-term initiative, requiring major changes both in the traditional method of training medical and other health professions students and in the relationship between university health science centers and community health service delivery systems. The Basic AHEC Program was initiated in 1972 and the Model State Supported AHEC Program was initiated in 1993. The Health Professions Education Partnerships Act of 1998 reauthorized the AHEC Program for five years.¹

The Florida AHEC Network is an extensive, statewide system for health professional education and support founded upon 10 regional AHECs. Each AHEC is supported by an AHEC program at one of the state's five medical schools. The organization of the network allows the AHECs to draw upon the resources of the academic health centers to address local health care issues. The Florida AHEC Network has addressed the primary health care needs of Florida's underserved populations by:

- Extending academic health resources;
- Providing information and support to community health care providers;
- Emphasizing the primary care needs of medically underserved populations;
- Encouraging health professions education programs to enhance their curricula with community-based clinical experiences, interdisciplinary training, distance education and other programs vital to students' learning; and
- Influencing the future health professional workforce by developing programs to generate interest in health careers among minority and disadvantaged youth.

Under s. 381.0402, F.S., the Department of Health, in cooperation with the state-approved medical schools in Florida must organize an AHEC network based on earlier medically indigent demonstration projects and must evaluate the impact of each network on improving access to services by persons who are medically underserved. The network must be a catalyst for the primary care training of health professionals through increased opportunities for training in medically underserved areas. The Department of Health must contract to assist in funding an AHEC network which links the provision of primary care services to low-income persons with the education of medical students, interns, and residents.

The AHEC network must be coordinated with and under contract with the state-approved medical schools. The AHEC network must:

- Be coordinated with and under contract with the state-approved medical schools, which shall be responsible for the clinical training and supervision.
- Divide the state into service areas with each medical school coordinating the recruiting, training, and retention of medical students within its assigned area.
- Use a multidisciplinary approach with appropriate medical supervision.
- Use current community resources, such as county health departments, federally funded primary care centers, or other primary health care providers, as community-based sites for training medical students, interns, and residents.

The Department of Health must establish criteria and procedures for quality assurance, performance evaluations, periodic audits, and other appropriate safeguards for the network. The department must make every effort to assure that participating medical schools do not discriminate among enrollees with respect to age, race, sex, or health status. Participating medical schools may target high-risk medically needy population groups.

III. Effect of Proposed Changes:

The bill revises the Department of Health's duties relating to the AHEC network in Florida. The Department in cooperation with medical schools located in Florida which form the area health education center network, shall maintain and evaluate, rather than organize the network. The network is to focus on improving access to health services by persons who are medically underserved.

The network must serve as a catalyst for the primary care training of health professionals by increasing opportunities for training in medically underserved areas, increasing access to primary care services, providing health workforce recruitment, enhancing the quality of health care, and addressing current and emerging public health issues.

The Department of Health must contract with the medical schools to assist in funding the AHEC network, which links the provision of primary care services to medically underserved populations with the education of medical students, interns, and residents. The requirements for the AHEC network to be coordinated with and under contract with the state-approved medical schools are deleted. The bill revises the language relating to duties of and requirements for an AHEC network to conform to other changes in the bill.

The bill requires the AHEC network to:

- Facilitate the recruitment, training, and retention of students in the health care professions within each AHEC service area.
- Use community resources as sites for training students in the health care professions.
- Use a multidisciplinary approach with appropriate supervision.

The AHEC network must also:

- Assist providers in medically underserved areas and other safety net providers in remaining current in their fields through a variety of community resource initiatives;
- Strengthen the health care safety net in Florida by enhancing services and increasing access to care in medically underserved areas; and
- Provide other services, such as library and information resources, continuing professional education, technical assistance, and other support services, for providers who serve in medically underserved areas.

The Department of Health must make every effort to assure that the network, rather than participating medical schools, does not discriminate among enrollees with respect to age, race, sex, or health status.

The Department may use no more than 5 percent of the annual appropriation for administering and evaluating the network.

The bill deletes reference to specific federal grant programs.

The bill revises the duties of the Office of Rural Health within the Department of Health. The Office will coordinate with the federal government to designate health professional shortage areas, recommend foreign physicians for visa waivers, document health care professionals working in the public interest, and to place professionals using the federally funded recruitment incentive programs.

The effective date of the bill is July 1, 2005.
