SUMMARY ANALYSIS

Probate is the legal process for payment of the bills of the deceased, and distribution of the deceased's property to heirs. Current law pertaining to wills and estates is provided for in the Florida Probate Code. The Florida Probate Code provides that a surviving spouse has a right to a certain percentage of the decedent's estate, known as the "elective share". The surviving spouse, or the deceased's children if there is no surviving spouse, is also entitled to certain property, known as "exempt property", which they are entitled to receive before payment of debts by the estate. The Florida Probate Code provides for filing deadlines for when a person entitled to the elective share or exempt property must make an election, may withdraw an election, or file a petition for determination of exempt property. Current law provides that the timing requirements for making an election, withdrawing an election, or for filing for a petition for determination of exempt property, must be "within" a certain period. It is possible that a court may find that a spouse or child of a decedent has filed a notice too early. As a result, surviving spouses or children that file early may believe that they have made a timely filing only to find out too late that they did not and, as a result, have lost the right to make an election or receive exempt property.

This bill alters the time for filing to make an election, to withdraw an election, or to file a petition for determination of exempt property, and eliminates the potential for a surviving spouse or surviving children if there is no surviving spouse, to lose the right to an elective share or exempt property by filing too early. This bill also amends the Notice of Administration to require it to notify surviving spouse and beneficiaries of the time deadlines for filing for an elective share and exempt property.

The bill does not appear to have a fiscal impact on state or local governments.

FULL ANALYSIS

I. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS

A. HOUSE PRINCIPLES ANALYSIS:

Empower families -- This bill may serve or benefit families who might potentially otherwise lose the right to property in an estate proceeding.

Provide limited government -- This bill increases the procedural requirements in probate proceedings.

B. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

Background

Probate is the legal process for payment of the bills of the deceased, and distribution of the deceased's property to heirs. In general, the assets of the deceased are used first to pay the cost of the probate proceeding, than are used to pay the outstanding debts of the deceased, and the remainder paid to the heirs. If the deceased left a valid will, the estate is "testate", and the assets are distributed according to the will. If the deceased did not, the estate is "intestate", and the assets are distributed according to statute. There are two significant exceptions to these general rules. The concepts of homestead and exempt property transfer property to certain surviving dependents before such property is subject to being sold to pay creditors; and the elective share may provide a different inheritance for a surviving spouse in an intestate estate than was provided for in the will.

Commencement of Probate, Notice of Administration

A probate case is commenced by the filing of a Petition for Administration.¹ The court will appoint a personal representative, who is the person responsible to the court for collecting the assets of the deceased and transferring those assets to the creditors and heirs entitled to those assets. One of the first duties of the personal representative is to give notice to creditors and heirs of the existence of the probate proceeding and the appointment of the personal representative. This is accomplished by the publication of a Notice to Creditors and by serving a Notice of Administration on the surviving spouse and beneficiaries.

Section 733.212, F.S., requires the personal representative to promptly serve a copy of the notice of administration upon the decedent's surviving spouse, beneficiaries, the trustee of any trust and each trust beneficiary, and persons who may be entitled to exempt property. The notice must:

- Provide the name of the decedent;
- List the file number of the estate, the designation and address of the court in which the proceedings are pending;
- Provide the name and address of the personal representative and the personal representative's attorney; and
- State that interested persons are required to file with the court any objection by an interested person on whom the notice was served that challenges the validity of the will, the qualifications of the personal representative, venue, or jurisdiction of the court within 3 months after the date of service of a copy of the notice of administration on the objecting person.

Exempt Property

The Florida Probate Code provides that if a decedent was domiciled in Florida at the time of death, the surviving spouse, or if there is no surviving spouse, the children of the decedent, have the right to take certain property, which property is not subject to being sold to pay the claims of creditors. Such property is known as "exempt property".² Exempt property consists of:

- Household furniture, furnishings, and appliances in the decedent's usual place of abode, up to a net value of $10,000 as of the date of death;³
- All automobiles held in the decedent's name and regularly used by the decedent or members of the decedent's immediate family as their personal automobiles;⁴
- Florida prepaid college program contracts purchased and Florida college savings agreements;⁵
- Death benefits for certain teachers and school administrators.⁶

Section 732.402, F.S., provides that persons entitled to exempt property are deemed to have waived their rights to such property unless (1) a petition for determination of exempt property is filed by or on behalf of the persons entitled to the exempt property within four months after the date of service of the notice of administration; or (2) within 40 days from the date of termination of any proceeding involving the construction, admission to probate, or validity of the will or involving any other matter affecting any part of the estate subject to the statute.⁷

Elective Share

The surviving spouse of a person who dies domiciled in Florida has the right to elect to take a share of the estate of the decedent, known as the elective share, instead of the share of the estate provided for in the will of provided for in the laws of intestacy. The elective share is for the express purpose of caring for the surviving spouse. The elective share is 30% of the elective estate. The elective share is reduced by the value of any property passing to the spouse in the decedent's will, under intestacy, or as a pretermitted spouse. The elective share is in addition to the spouse's right to exempt property, a family allowance, and homestead. In Section 732.2135, F.S. provides that the elective share election must be filed within the earlier of (1) six months after the service of a copy of the notice of administration on the surviving spouse or attorney-infact or guardian of the property of the surviving spouse; or (2) two years after the decedent's death. An election may be withdrawn within eight months after the decedent's death, but before the court's order of contribution.

Timing of Objections to Validity of Will, Personal Representative, Venue, or Jurisdiction

Section 733.212(3), F.S., provides that a interested person must object to the validity of the will, the qualifications of the personal representative, the venue, or the jurisdiction of the court by filing a petition requesting relief within 3 months after the date of service of a copy of the notice of administration on the objecting person, or those objecting are forever barred.

Timing for Filing for Elective Share and Exempt Property

Because the current law provides that the timing requirements for making an election, withdrawing an election, and filing for a petition for determination of exempt property must be "within" a certain period, it is possible that a court may find that a spouse or child of a decedent has filed a notice too early. In such case, a spouse or child could lose their right to exempt property or to the elective share.

Effect of Bill

Elective Share

This bill amends s. 732.2135, F.S., to provide that a surviving spouse must file for an elective share "on or before" the earlier of the date that is 6 months after the date of service of a copy of the notice of administration or the date that is 2 years after the date of the decedent's death.

Section 732.2135, F.S. is also amended to provide that the surviving souse, guardian, or personal representative may withdraw an elective share "on or before the earlier of the date that is" 8 months after the date of the decedent's death or the date of a court order of contribution. This bill removes the word "within", and allows people entitled to an elective share to file anytime before the time limit provided instead of having to file in between certain periods of time.

Exempt Property

This bill amends s. 732.402, F.S., relating to exempt property by making the same changes to the word "within" as were made in the section relating to the elective share. This bill provides that a person entitled to exempt property shall be deemed to have waived their rights to exempt property unless a petition of determination of exempt property is filed "on or before the later of the date that is" 4 months after the date of service of the notice of administration or the date that is 40 days after the date of termination of any proceeding involving the estate.

Notice of Administration

This bill amends s. 733.212, F.S., to require that a notice of administration include notice to a surviving spouse and beneficiaries of the timing deadlines for filing for an elective share and exempt property.

Timing of Objections to Validity of Will, Personal Representative, Venue, or Jurisdiction

This bill amends s. 733.212, F.S., to remove the "within" from the timing requirement for objecting to the validity of the will, the qualifications of the personal representative, the venue, or the jurisdiction of the court. This bill provides that the filing deadline of a petition or other pleading requesting relief under this section be "on or before the date that is" 3 months after the date of service of a copy of the notice of administration on the objecting person, or those objections are forever barred.

Timing of Service

This bill also amends s. 733.212, F.S. to provide that, for determining deadlines established by reference to the date of the service of a copy of the notice of administration, service is deemed to occur on the date the waiver is filed.

C. SECTION DIRECTORY:

Section 1 amends s. 732.2135, F.S., revising the time-period for when an election must be filed and for an election withdrawal.

Section 2 amends s. 732.402, F.S., revising the time-period when a person entitled to exempt property must file a petition for determination of exempt property.

	ad cir Th ind	there the personal representative cannot find a person entitled to receive a copy of the notice of liministration, the personal representative is required to publish the notice in a newspaper of general culation. This bill increases the information required to be published in the notice of administration. The number of lines that the notice takes up on a page determines the cost to the estate. By creasing the amount of information in the notice, this bill adds to the length of the notice, and as a sult, the cost of publication to the estate and heirs will likely increase.
