SUMMARY ANALYSIS

For those employers engaged in the construction industry that obtain workers' compensation insurance from a self-insurance fund, the bill prohibits contractors from rejecting the workers' compensation insurance based solely on the fact the insurance provider, the self-insurance fund, is not rated by a nationally recognized insurance rating service. This preclusion is only effective if the self-insurance fund participates in the Florida Workers' Compensation Insurance Guaranty Association. There is no current law requiring workers' compensation insurers or self-insurance funds to be rated by a rating service as a condition of being licensed to write workers' compensation insurance.

The bill does not appear to have a fiscal impact on state or local government.

This bill is effective July 1, 2007,

FULL ANALYSIS

I. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS

A. HOUSE PRINCIPLES ANALYSIS:

Safeguard Individual Liberty: The bill prohibits a contractor from rejecting workers' compensation coverage from a self-insurance fund of another contractor solely because the coverage is not obtained from a nationally rated self-insurance fund as long as the fund participates in a guaranty association.

B. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

Background on Construction Contracts and Insurance Requirements

Most general contractors and subcontractors carry numerous kinds of insurance, such as workers' compensation¹ and commercial liability. Insurance costs are factored into the contractors' bids on a construction project. Insurance requirements for a particular construction project are included in the resulting construction contracts between the owner and general contractor, the general contractor and subcontractor, and/or subcontractor and sub-subcontractor or materialman.

Although there are no laws specifically addressing the practice, a general contractor or subcontractor may require, as a part of the construction contract, a certificate of insurance or an insurance policy to be submitted by a subcontractor as a condition of work. The certificate of insurance is evidence of insurance in lieu of an actual copy of an insurance policy. At some point upon signing a construction contract, sometimes before the work begins and sometimes after, the subcontractor provides a certificate of insurance to the general contractor listing the insurance provided by the subcontractor. Most times the general contractor reviews all documents required to be submitted under the construction contract, including the certificate of insurance, prior to paying the first invoice for each subcontractor. If an insurance policy or certificate of insurance is not submitted or if it does not meet the standards of the general contractor requiring the policy under the contract, the contractor may prohibit the other party from working on the construction project or may withhold payment for work already done until the proper insurance is obtained and proof is submitted.

According to proponents of the bill, as part of the construction contract, some contractors, typically general contractors, require their subcontractors to obtain workers' compensation insurance from an insurer that is rated by a nationally recognized insurance rating service (e.g., A.M. Best, Standard & Poor's, Moody's). The contractors further require the insurer to maintain a specified rating from the rating service (e.g. A, A- or better). If a subcontractor's workers' compensation insurance is not written by a rated insurer, in order to overcome any insurance concern, some general contractors allow subcontractors to furnish evidence the subcontractor has a reinsurance endorsement with a reinsurer meeting the rating requirement² or to furnish financial information about the subcontractor's insurer for the general contractor to review. However, some general contractors do not allow subcontractors to provide information to overcome the insurance concern.

² Typically, a "cut-through" endorsement to a reinsurer is required. This is a guarantee by a reinsurance company that payment for losses incurred by a third party (i.e. general contractor) will be made even though that third party has no contractual arrangement with the reinsurance company.

Background on Rating of Insurance Companies and Self-Insurance Funds

Five independent agencies – A.M. Best, Fitch, Moody’s, Standard & Poor’s, and Weiss – rate the financial strength of insurance companies. Each agency has its own rating scale, its own rating standards, its own population of rated companies, and its own distribution of companies across its scale. Each rating agency uses numbers or pluses and minuses to indicate minor variations in rating from another rating class. Rating agencies can disagree about an insurance company’s rating and over time ratings can change for companies.

Rating agencies also rate self-insurance funds. Self-insurance funds are created for the purpose of pooling and spreading liabilities of its group members in any commercial property or casualty risk or surety insurance. Under s. 624.4621, F.S., two or more employers are allowed to pool their workers’ compensation liabilities and form a self insurance fund for workers’ compensation purposes. This type of self-insurance fund is called a group self-insurance fund.

A group self-insurance fund must comply with administrative rules adopted by the Financial Services Commission³ relating to reserve requirements, organization, and operation. The rules relating to reserve requirements are designed to insure the self-insurance fund can maintain financial solvency. Current law also requires workers’ compensation self-insurance funds to carry reinsurance, unless the fund is comprised of state or local government employers.⁴ Current law establishes restrictions on dividend or premium refunds made by a workers’ compensation self insurance fund.⁵ Workers’ compensation self-insurance funds are subject to the insurance premium tax, but at a reduced rate. The rate is reduced from 1.75 percent of the gross receipt of insurance premiums to 1.6 percent.⁶ Workers’ compensation self-insurance funds are subject to license taxes and premium receipt taxes.⁷ Current law also requires workers’ compensation self-insurance funds to participate in the Florida Self-Insurance Fund Guaranty Association (Association).⁸ The Association will step in and pay workers’ compensation claims of self-insurance funds that become insolvent.⁹

Effect of Proposed Changes

There is no current law requiring workers’ compensation insurers or self-insurance funds to be rated by a rating service as a condition of being licensed to write workers’ compensation insurance. For those employers engaged in the construction industry that obtain workers’ compensation insurance from a self-insurance fund, the bill prohibits contractors from rejecting the workers’ compensation insurance based solely on the fact the insurance provider, the self-insurance fund, is not rated by a nationally recognized insurance rating service. This preclusion is only effective if the self-insurance fund participates in the Florida Workers’ Compensation Insurance Guaranty Association.
