I. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS

A. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

Background

Current law provides an exemption from the payment of tuition and certain fees at a school district that provides postsecondary career programs, a community college, or a state university for a student:

- Who is or was, at the time he or she reached 18 years of age, in the custody of the Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS);
- Who is or was, at the time he or she reached 18 years of age, in the custody of a relative under s. 39.5085, F.S.(Relative Caregiver Program);
- Who was adopted from the DCFS after May 5, 1997; or
- Who, after spending at least 6 months in the custody of DCFS after reaching 16 years of age, was placed in a guardianship by the court.¹

The Department of Education (DOE) reported that 1,283 students took advantage of the fee exemption at a community college during the 2008-09 academic year, taking a total of 16,320 credit hours at a cost of $1.9 million dollars.² According to the Board of Governors, 189 students took advantage of the fee exemption at a state university during the 2008 -09 academic year, at a cost of $633,088 dollars.³ No information was provided on the number of students, if any, using the fee exemption in a school district postsecondary career program.

DCFS reported that in 2008-2009: 1,266 children were 18 years of age and in the custody of DCF; 603 children were placed in the custody of a relative under the Relative Caregiver Program; 3,777 children were adopted; and 218 children were placed in guardianship by the court after spending at least six months in custody. Information on the number of students who are currently eligible for the fee exemption was not available.

Use of the exemption is not limited to any specific type or level of educational program. It appears that the exemption could be used, to the extent the specified time limit permits, for any workforce education program, any associate degree program, any baccalaureate degree program, any graduate degree program, or any professional degree program.

The fee exemption includes fees associated with enrollment in career-preparatory instruction and completion of the college-level communication and computation skills testing program.⁴ The college-level communication and computation skills testing program was repealed by Section 21 of Ch. 2009-50, L.O.F. However, an associate in arts or baccalaureate degree may not be conferred upon any student who fails to successfully complete one of the following requirements:

- Achieve a score that meets or exceed a minimum score on a nationally standardized examination, as established by the State Board of Education in conjunction with the Board of Governors;⁵ or
- Demonstrate successful remediation of any academic deficiencies and achieve a cumulative GPA of 2.5 or above, on a 4.0 scale, in postsecondary-level coursework identified by the State Board of Education in conjunction with the Board of Governors.

The provisions of s. 1009.25(2)(c), F.S., establish a time limitation for use of the exemption and state that “. . . the exemption remains valid for no more than 4 years after the date of graduation from high school.”⁶ There has been some confusion regarding which of the four categories of students are covered by the 4-year time limitation. Representatives of DCFS indicate that the 4-year time limitation applies only to students in the custody of a relative under the Relative Caregiver Program or adopted from DCFS. DCFS states that the 4-year time limitation does not apply to the two categories of students that were added to the exemption in 2006 – students in the custody of DCFS at the age of 18 and students placed in guardianship by the court.⁷

The Department of Education (DOE) reported that many postsecondary institutions have expressed confusion regarding the time limitation on the eligibility of students who qualified for this exemption. Consequently, some institutions may have improperly imposed a time limitation on some students.⁸

The Board of Governors (BOG) interprets the time limitation on the exemption for all four classifications to extend up until the time the student reaches the age of 23.⁹ The BOG’s interpretation is also consistent with the state¹⁰ and federal Foster Care Independent Living Program¹¹ which allows young adults to remain eligible for postsecondary benefits until they reach the age of 23.¹²

Effect of Proposed Changes

CS/HB 1363 revises provisions relating to the fee exemption provided for students who were in the custody of the Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS), in the custody of a relative under the Relative Caregiver Program, adopted from DCFS after May 5, 1997, or placed in a guardianship by the court.

The bill establishes separate fee exemptions for:

- a student in the custody of DCFS or placed in a guardianship by the court; and
- a student in the custody of a relative under the Relative Caregiver Program or adopted from DCFS after May 5, 1997.

Each fee exemption remains valid until a student reaches 28 years of age.

The bill removes the provisions referencing the college-level communication and computation skills testing program (CLAST), which was repealed during the 2009 Legislative session.

⁵ The State Board of Education (Rule 6A-10.0311) and Board of Governors (Regulation 6.017) have adopted rules and regulations relating to scores and national standardized exams, i.e. Accuplacer, SAT Reasoning Test, and ACT.

IV. AMENDMENTS/COUNCIL OR COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTE CHANGES

On March 25, 2010, the State Universities & Private Colleges Policy Committee adopted one amendment to HB 1363 and reported the bill favorably as a Committee Substitute (CS). The amendment revises the time limitation for use of the fee exemption. A student may use the exemption until the student reaches the age of 28. The amendment also removes obsolete language regarding the college-level communication and computation skills testing program. This analysis is drafted to the CS.
