A. COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTE..... Statement of Substantial Changes

B. AMENDMENTS..... Technical amendments were recommended

Amendments were recommended

Significant amendments were recommended

I. Summary:

The bill amends legislative intent by eliminating the responsibility of the Department of Children and Family Services (DCF or department) to establish, maintain, and oversee child welfare training academies and by requiring that persons providing child welfare services earn and maintain a certification from a third party credentialing entity that is approved by DCF. The bill creates definitions for the terms "child welfare certification," "core competency," "pre-service curriculum," and "professional credentialing entity." The bill also provides requirements for a credentialing entity to secure DCF approval and requires the department to approve core competencies and related pre-service curricula. The use of the Child Welfare Training Trust Fund is amended, and the child welfare training academies are eliminated. The bill provides for entities to contract for training and grants reciprocity to individuals who hold certificates issued by the department for a specified period. The bill also eliminates the ability of the department to develop certification programs.

There is a positive fiscal impact to the state estimated to be a savings of approximately $530,194 in the first year and $423,394 in subsequent years in General Revenue and Trust Funds by eliminating a $600,000 child welfare training academy contract. The estimated costs to certify

DCF-employed Child Protective Investigators in Fiscal Year 2011-12 would be $69,806, with a recurring annual cost of $176,606.

	Fiscal Year 2011-12	Fiscal Year 2012-13
Cost of Child Welfare Training Academy	($600,000)	($600,000)
Initial and Ongoing Certification Costs for 1,241 Child Protective Investigators	$69,806	$176,606
Net Savings	($530,194)	($423,394)

The bill substantially amends ss. 402.40 and 402.731 of the Florida Statutes.

II. Present Situation:

Statewide Training

Currently, the department is required to establish, maintain, and oversee a comprehensive system of child welfare training, and all persons providing child welfare services are required to successfully complete the training program pertinent to their areas of responsibility.¹ The department is also authorized to create certification programs for its employees and service providers to ensure that only qualified employees, and service providers provide client services.² Core competencies have been established collaboratively by the department with the stakeholder community and, according to the department, community-based care (CBC) agencies and sheriffs’ offices can supplement or augment the minimum curriculum standards to meet their local needs.

The department has the authority to develop rules³ that include qualifications for certification, including training and testing requirements, continuing education requirements for ongoing certification, and decertification procedures to be used to determine when an individual no longer meets the qualifications for certification and to implement the decertification of an employee or agent.⁴

The department is also required to establish child welfare training academies to perform one or more of the following:

- Offer one or more of the developed training curricula;
- Administer the certification process;
- Develop, validate, and periodically evaluate additional training curricula determined to be necessary, including advanced training that is specific to a region or contractor, or that meets a particular training need; or
- Offer any additional training curricula.⁵

² See s. 402.731, F.S.

³ See ss. 402.40 and 402.731, F.S. On October 14, 2010, a training and certification rule was adopted to carry out the provisions of ss. 402.40 and 402.731, F.S., and codify policy that has been in existence for the past ten years. The rule applies uniform, minimum, initial, and on-going training and certification standards to all DCF, community based care and sheriff’s office employees working in child welfare. See 65C-33, FAC.

⁴ See s. 402.731, F.S.

⁵ See s. 402.40, F.S.

The department is required to solicit competitively all training academy contracts.⁶

Department rule defines “certification” as the process whereby an individual must demonstrate the knowledge, skills, abilities and priorities necessary to competently discharge the duties of a Florida child protection professional, as evidenced by the successful completion of all applicable classroom instruction, field training, testing, and job-performance requirements of his or her position classification.⁷ Typically, each individual in a position requiring certification must be certified within one year of the date of hire, or within one year of having successfully completed a post-test or a waiver test, whichever is earlier. Certification is a condition of employment in those positions requiring certification. Absent special circumstances, certification is valid for a period of no longer than three years.⁸

Each type of child protection certification has a different training, testing, and certification requirement, all of which are established by the department. Currently, there are 11 types of certification designations for child protection professionals:

- Child Protective Investigator;
- Child Protective Investigations Supervisor;
- Child Protective Investigations Specialist;
- Child Protection Case Manager;
- Child Protection Case Management Supervisor;
- Child Protection Case Management Specialist;
- Child Protection Licensing Counselor;
- Child Protection Licensing Supervisor;
- Child Protection Licensing Specialist;
- Child Protection Specialized Services Professional; and
- Child Welfare Trainer.⁹

According to the department, during calendar year 2010, DCF initially certified 938 and recertified 1,239 child welfare professionals in the investigative, case management, and licensing specialties. Since there are approximately 1,475 child protective investigators (employed through either DCF or sheriff’s offices) and 2,200 case managers statewide, more than half of the state’s child welfare professionals (2,177 or 59%) who are required to be certified are currently certified. The remaining individuals are in the process of achieving certification because they are newly hired, or have not yet met minimum certification requirements.¹⁰

In addition, there are currently 344 child welfare professionals who have met certification requirements to be a Child Welfare Trainer. Community-based care agencies, sheriff’s offices, or the department employs these staff; however, child welfare training may be only one of their job duties. Certified child welfare trainers teach the department-approved standard pre-service curriculum, and the content must be delivered in its entirety to all newly hired child protective investigative and case management staff statewide.¹¹ The intent of this model is to ensure that all necessary statutory, policy, procedural and best practice information is conveyed to child welfare personnel by qualified child welfare trainers and that minimum competency requirements are consistent statewide.¹²

⁶ Id. The department currently has contracts with the University of South Florida and Florida International University, to not only train and certify child welfare trainers, but also to track and document the certification and recertification of all child welfare staff, and to coordinate all registration for, and participation in, the pre-service training and testing of all newly hired child welfare staff.

The department reports¹³ that CBCs and sheriff's offices are allowed to contract for or otherwise arrange for additional training or certifications from local or state providers. Funding is provided to regions, circuits, community-based care agencies, and sheriff's offices to deliver the department training curriculum to child welfare staff internally or through contract; however, those entities may add to the content to meet any local training need.

Child Welfare Certificate Offered by Schools of Social Work at State Universities

Many of the state's universities school of social work in offer a child welfare certificate. The department has developed partnerships with these entities in order to coordinate education and training requirements for those students earning social work degrees who want to work in child welfare. For example, the School of Social Work at Florida State University will allow students who successfully pass the pre-service DCF exam to waive the university required certificate exam. In addition, current employees of the department and the CBCs may be eligible to exempt the university internship requirement.¹⁴

Federal Requirements for Child Welfare Training

Federal regulations require states to prepare a five-year comprehensive Child and Family Services Plan (CFSP),¹⁵ which lays the groundwork for a system of coordinated, integrated, and culturally relevant family-focused services in state child welfare agencies. The Annual Progress and Services Report (APSR) provides yearly updates on the progress made toward accomplishing the goals and objectives in the CFSP. Completion of the APSR satisfies federal regulations by providing updates on a state's annual progress for the previous fiscal year and planned activities for the upcoming fiscal year.^{16,17}

¹⁷ In order to receive funds for FFY 2011, for Child Welfare Services (title IV-B), Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA), Chafee Foster Care Independence Program (CFCIP) and Education and Training Vouchers (ETV) programs, the APSR had to be submitted to the Children's Bureau by June 30, 2010.

A state's CFSP must include a staff development and training plan in support of the goals and objectives in the CFSP which addresses both of the title IV-B programs covered by the plan.¹⁸ Training must be an on-going activity and must include content from various disciplines and knowledge bases relevant to child and family services policies, programs and practices.

Training activities in this plan must also be included in the department's Title IV-E training program.¹⁹ These elements are required to receive federal funding. According to the department, failure to obtain approval prior to implementation of any changes to the training requirements could jeopardize those resources.²⁰

Child Welfare Training Trust Fund

The Child Welfare Training Trust Fund was created to fund child welfare training, including securing consultants to develop the training system. The trust fund receives one dollar from certain noncriminal traffic infractions,²¹ receives monies from an additional fee on birth certificates and dissolution of marriage filings,²² and may receive funds from any other public or private source.²³

The Florida Certification Board

The Florida Certification Board (FCB or Board) provides a number of certifications, including those for substance abuse counselors, prevention specialists, criminal justice professionals, mental health professionals, and behavioral health technicians in Florida. The Board does not offer or provide child welfare training.²⁴

While the current training and certification program administered by the department meets the entry-level training and testing needs of CBC providers, the FCB's CBC partners indicated a desire to explore the development of an additional level of certification that is specific to child welfare case managers.²⁵ In response, the board added the Child Welfare Case Manager (CWCM) to its professional certification programs. The CWCM certification is a voluntary designation of professional competency.²⁶ The FCB reports that 193 individuals have an active CWCM certification, and almost all of those individuals are employed by CBCs.

²⁵ Id. The FCB was approached in 2006 by Community Based Care of Seminole, Inc. and Big Bend Community Based Care, Inc. to explore the possibility of creating a Child Welfare Case Manager (CWCM) credential in the state of Florida.

²⁶ Id. In order to receive the CWCM, the Board reviews the application portfolio submitted by an applicant, administers the written exam when required, and issues the certification. The department sanctioned training is accepted by the FCB. There is a one time $150 certification fee, a $75 exam fee, and a $125 renewal fee due annually in October. Certified individuals must complete 20 CEUs annually in order to be recertified.

III. Effect of Proposed Changes:

Provisions in the bill eliminate the department's child welfare training program and instead require that individuals providing child welfare services earn and maintain a professional certification from a department approved certification entity. The bill also removes the ability of the department to create certification programs, so individuals wanting or needing child welfare certification will have to acquire that certification from a third-party credentialing entity that is approved by DCF.

The department reports that the Florida Certification Board is the only "professional credentialing entity" as defined in the bill currently in existence. The bill provides that credentialing entities shall grant reciprocity and award certification to individuals in good standing who hold certification issued by the department at no cost to the state or the individual for a period of no less than a year from the implementation of certification programs. However, it remains unclear what the consequences would be in a number of situations. For example:

- The board requires a minimum of a bachelor's degree in order to meet the requirements for certification.²⁷ This could subject those individuals currently employed who have no degree and are unable to earn a degree within the period of reciprocity to termination from employment and would prevent non-degreed individuals from being hired in the future.
- The board does not currently offer the variety of certifications that are offered by the department, including one for child protective investigators. It is unclear how those individuals would obtain the certifications required for employment in their specific practice areas.

While the bill provides that the department, the CBCs, and sheriff's offices may contract for training, currently, however, neither the Board nor any other organization offers child welfare or protective investigator training.

Eliminating the department training program would appear to have some impact on the partnerships the department has with schools of social work at universities.

The bill also broadens the use of the Child Welfare Training Trust Fund, from being used to fund a comprehensive system of child welfare training, including the development of the training and the establishment of training academies, to funding professional development. It is unclear what impact this will have on the trust fund.

IV. Constitutional Issues:

A. Municipality/County Mandates Restrictions:

The provisions of this bill have no impact on municipalities and counties under the requirement of Article VII, Section 18 of the Florida Constitution.

²⁷ The board requires a minimum of a bachelor's degree from an accredited college or university in a related or unrelated field. Related fields are social work, psychology, sociology, human services, counseling, child development, education, guidance counseling, public administration, public health administration, criminology, or criminal justice. The Florida Certification Board, Available at: <http://www.flcertificationboard.org/>. (Last visited February 2, 2011).

B. Public Records/Open Meetings Issues:

The provisions of this bill have no impact on public records or open meetings issues under the requirements of Article I, Section 24(a) and (b) of the Florida Constitution.

C. Trust Funds Restrictions:

The provisions of this bill have no impact on the trust fund restrictions under the requirements of Article III, Subsection 19(f) of the Florida Constitution.

D. Other Constitutional Issues:

Article II, section 3 of the Florida Constitution creates the three branches of Florida's government, and prohibits one branch from exercising the powers of another branch. This separation of powers doctrine includes a prohibition on one branch delegating its constitutionally assigned powers to another branch.²⁸ Therefore, statutes granting power to the executive branch "must clearly announce adequate standards to guide in the execution of the powers delegated. The statute must so clearly define the power delegated that the [executive] is precluded from acting through whim, showing favoritism, or exercising unbridled discretion."²⁹ The Legislature may delegate some discretion in the operation and enforcement of the law, but it cannot delegate the power to say what the law is.³⁰

The bill appears to require the credentialing entities to "establish professional requirements and standards applicants must achieve in order to obtain a child welfare certification," and the bill also deletes a provision authorizing the department to develop "rules that include qualifications for certification, including training and testing requirements." If the bill removes ascertainable minimal standards and guidelines set by the Legislature, and replaces them with the unfixed standards of a private entity, there may be a delegation issue, as such standards may not substitute for and supplant the Legislature's duty to determine the law.

V. Fiscal Impact Statement:A. Tax/Fee Issues:

None.

B. Private Sector Impact:

The Florida Certification Board charges the individual applicant for the CWCM certification a certification fee, an exam fee if an exam is required, and an annual renewal fee. While the bill provides for reciprocity for a period of at least a year from the time of implementation of department approved certification programs, all child welfare staff who are required to be certified will eventually have to have obtain, at cost to the individual or the employing entity, certification from a credentialing entity in order to continue to be employed. The bill does not specify who will assume the cost associated with the certification and renewal certification provided through the newly defined professional credentialing entity, but it would appear to be either the individual seeking certification or his or her respective employing agency.

The department estimates that the cost for certifying 2,200 CBC child welfare case managers in Fiscal Year 2011-12 to be $123,750, with an annualized cost of $288,750. In addition, there are 234 child protective investigators at seven contracted Sheriff's offices. The department estimates that the cost for certifying these investigators will be $13,162 for Fiscal Year 2011-12 and $30,712 in subsequent years.

C. Government Sector Impact:

While the provisions of the bill create an initial net savings, the long-term fiscal impact on government is unknown. The department has reported³¹ that:

- The bill does not specify the entity responsible for the costs related to the development, maintenance, and delivery of the pre-service curricula. The department through a $675,782 contract with Florida International University currently provides these functions. This contract amount was included in the department's initial annual cost savings projection of $1.3 million.
- Currently the department provides a number of certifications not provided by any third-party entity, e.g., licensing staff. It is not known what the costs would be to develop a third-party credential for those child welfare specializations.

VI. Technical Deficiencies:

None.

VII. Related Issues:

It does not appear that the credentialing entities that must be approved by the department to supply the services required by the bill need to be selected by competitive solicitation. The services to be supplied by the entities pursuant to the requirements of this bill do not appear to be covered by the exemptions specified in Section 287.057(3)(f), F.S. The Legislature may wish to make clear what type of competitive process, if any, is required by this bill.

If more than one credentialing entity is allowed to provide the services required by the bill, more than one set of certification standards might be created.
