SUMMARY ANALYSIS

The bill creates s. 394.48, F.S., authorizing the chief judge of each judicial circuit to establish a Military Veterans and Servicemembers Court Program (Program) for veterans and servicemembers who are convicted of a criminal offense and who suffer from a mental illness, TBI, or substance abuse disorder as a result of their military service. Under the Program, a judge may sentence such veterans and servicemembers in accordance with ch. 921, F.S. in a manner that appropriately addresses the severity of the mental illness, TBI, or substance abuse disorder through services tailored to the individual needs of the participant. Entry must be based upon the sentencing court's assessment of the defendant's criminal history, military service, substance abuse treatment needs, mental health treatment needs, amenability to the services of the program, the recommendation of the state attorney and the victim, if any, and the defendant's agreement to enter the program.

The bill also creates s. 948.21, F.S., authorizing a court to impose a condition of supervision requiring probationers or community controllees whose crime was committed on or after July 1, 2012, and who is a servicemember or veteran, who suffers from a military service-related mental illness, TBI, or substance abuse disorder, to participate in a treatment program capable of treating the offender. The court must give preference to treatment programs for which the offender is eligible through the United States Department of Veterans Affairs or the Florida Department of Veterans' Affairs.

The bill does not appear to have a fiscal impact on state or local governments and is effective July 1, 2012.

FULL ANALYSIS

I. SUBSTANTIVE ANALYSIS

A. EFFECT OF PROPOSED CHANGES:

Background

In 2008, the Florida Department of Veterans' Affairs and the Florida Office of Drug Control issued a paper examining the issue of mental health and substance abuse needs of returning veterans and their families.¹ The study noted that combat medical advances are enabling veterans of Operation Iraqi Freedom (OIF) and Operation Enduring Freedom (OEF) to survive wounds that would have been fatal in previous conflicts, and thus some are returning with "more complex physical and emotional disorders, such as Traumatic Brain Injuries (TBI) and Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD), substance abuse and depression."² The study also estimated that approximately 29,000 returning veterans residing in Florida may suffer from PTSD or some form of major depression.³

A 2008 Rand Center report indicated that preliminary studies showed that 5 to 15 percent of OIF and OEF service members are returning with PTSD, 2 to 10 percent with depression, and an unknown number with TBI.⁴ A person with any of these disorders also has a greater likelihood of experiencing other psychiatric diagnoses than do other persons.⁵

A report by the Center for Mental Health Services National GAINS Center of the federal Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) noted that many veterans coming into contact with the criminal justice system may have unmet service needs.⁶ Veterans' courts have been established across the country as some judges have begun to recognize a correlation between the commission of offenses by veterans and substance abuse issues, mental health issues, and cognitive functioning problems.

Veterans' courts have the goal of identifying veterans who would benefit from a treatment program instead of incarceration or other sanctions. They are typically patterned after successful specialty courts such as drug courts and mental health courts. Since 2008, legislation authorizing the establishment of veterans' courts has been adopted or at least considered in California, Colorado, Illinois, Oregon, Texas and Virginia, and has been considered in Connecticut, Minnesota, Nevada, New Mexico, New York and Oklahoma.⁷

Veterans' Courts in Florida

There are several veterans' court and veterans' jail diversion initiatives in Florida.

The veterans' court program in Miami-Dade County is available to veterans who are facing minor drug offenses and do not have a violent or extensive criminal history. In its initial stages, the program has drawn participants from defendants who are already involved with traditional drug court. They receive similar treatment, but also are assisted by a United States Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) psychologist and outreach coordinator.⁸

The Palm Beach County veterans' docket began operating in November 2010.⁹ A feature of the program is the assignment of a VA social worker supervisor to act as the court's VA liaison. This VA employee has oversight of screening and case management services for eligible veterans. In addition to receiving any needed mental health and substance abuse treatment, participating veterans also have access to VA programs that address homelessness and unemployment.

In April 2011, the Okaloosa County Commission approved creation of a veterans' court for the county that is expected to begin operation later this year. Although there is currently no formal veterans' court, many cases of veterans in the county are already being referred to a court docket with special knowledge of veterans and veterans' issues. To determine eligibility, offenders are asked at initial booking if they have ever served in the military and what type of discharge they received. Veterans are further asked if they will sign a release in order to share information with the VA. Further screening is conducted through the Pre-Trial Services Office, and the program uses drug court case managers to monitor participants.

The 12th Judicial Circuit (DeSoto, Sarasota and Manatee Counties) has established a program called "Courts Assisting Veterans." While not a true veterans' court, it seeks to achieve similar goals through the use of existing programs, including referral of veterans to existing drug and mental health courts.¹⁰

In October, 2009, the Department of Children and Families Mental Health Program Office (department) was awarded over $1.8 million from SAMHSA over the next five years to provide services and support for Florida's returning veterans who served in Iraq and Afghanistan and who suffer from PTSD and other behavioral health disorders. The department describes the grant and the project as follows:

The project will redesign the state's response to the needs of veterans and their family members by helping returning veterans learn to cope with the trauma of war and the adjustments of coming home and avoiding unnecessary involvement with the criminal justice system. Florida's project is based on a foundation of evidence-based screening, assessment, treatment and recovery practices. The grant will enable the Department to implement two veteran's jail diversion pilot projects for 240 veterans over the next five years. This grant will expand the Department's existing jail diversion programs by identifying veterans who have an initial contact with the criminal justice system, helping them enroll in Veteran's Administration benefits for those who are eligible, providing trauma-related treatment services, linking them with support services in their community, and providing specialized peer support services. Additionally, this grant enables the Department to include family members as recipients of services. One unique aspect of this grant is Florida's creation and implementation of a new state-level Veteran Peer Support Specialist credential, possible through the Department's ongoing partnership with the Florida Certification Board. Certification of trained veterans will professionalize what we know works - trained veterans who've been there helping other returning veterans adjust to their home and community. In the first year, the grant from the federal Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) will provide DCF with $268,849. Hillsborough County is one of two sites that will launch Florida's Jail Diversion and Trauma Recovery Program. The location of the other pilot project has not yet been determined.¹¹

Terms and Conditions of Probation

Probation is a form of community supervision requiring specified contacts with parole and probation officers and compliance with court-ordered conditions of supervision.¹² When someone is sentenced to probation, the court determines the terms and conditions of his or her supervision.¹³ Section 948.03, F.S., sets forth standard conditions of supervision that a court may impose on offenders sentenced probation. These include conditions such as a requirement that the offender report to the probation and parole supervisors as directed, permit such supervisors to visit him or her at his or her home or elsewhere, work faithfully at suitable employment insofar as may be possible, remain within a specified place, submit written monthly reports, abide by the laws of the state, etc.¹⁴ In addition to the standard conditions of supervision, the court can impose any other special condition of supervision it considers proper (e.g., a condition requiring an offender to participate in treatment).¹⁵

Effect of the Bill

The bill creates s. 394.48, F.S., entitled “Military veterans and servicemembers court programs.” The bill authorizes the chief judge of each judicial circuit to establish a Military Veterans and Servicemembers Court Program (Program) under which veterans¹⁶ and servicemembers¹⁷ who are convicted of a criminal offense and who suffer from a mental illness, TBI, or substance abuse disorder as a result of their military service can be sentenced in accordance with ch. 921, F.S. in a manner that appropriately addresses the severity of the mental illness, TBI, or substance abuse disorder through services tailored to the individual needs of the participant.

The bill requires entry into a Program to be based upon the sentencing court’s assessment of the defendant’s criminal history, military service, substance abuse treatment needs, mental health treatment needs, amenability to the services of the program, the recommendation of the state attorney and the victim, if any, and the defendant’s agreement to enter the program.

The bill also creates s. 948.21, F.S., entitled “Condition of probation or community control; military service members and veterans.” The bill authorizes a court to impose a condition of supervision requiring probationers or community controllees whose crime was committed on or after July 1, 2012, and who is a servicemember or veteran, who suffers from a military service-related mental illness, TBI, or substance abuse disorder, to participate in a treatment program capable of treating the offender’s mental illness, TBI, or substance abuse disorder. The bill requires the court to give preference to treatment programs for which the probationer or community controllee is eligible through the United States Department of Veterans Affairs or the Florida Department of Veterans’ Affairs.
