I. Summary:

The bill allows private property owners who provide outdoor recreational opportunities on their property to enter into written agreements with the state, as opposed to a formal lease, and still receive the benefit of the limitation of liability.

The bill also provides limitation of liability protection to private property owners who make their land available to specific persons, as opposed to only “the public,” for the purpose of hunting, fishing or wildlife viewing. To limit liability, the landowner must provide notice of the liability limits to the person or persons using the land and must not derive revenue from patronage of the property for outdoor recreational purposes.

This bill substantially amends section 375.251, Florida Statutes.

II. Present Situation:

Legal Duties for Landowners Towards Persons on Their Land

In a negligence action, to be entitled to certain remedies, a plaintiff must prove:

- a lawful duty exists;
- the duty was breached; and
- damages were suffered as a result of the breach.

Current tort law in Florida related to landowners' duty to persons on their land is governed by the status of the person and the duty of care owed by the landowner to the person.¹ There are two basic categories of persons on land, invitees and trespassers.

Generally, an invitee is a person who was invited to enter the land.² Section 768.075(3)(a)1., F.S., defines "invitation" to mean, "the visitor entering the premises has an objectively reasonable belief that he or she has been invited or is otherwise welcome on that portion of the real property where injury occurs." Landowners owe certain duties to invitees and can be sued in tort if an injury is caused by a breach of a duty. The duties owed to invitees are:

- to use reasonable care to keep and maintain property in reasonably safe condition; and
- to warn of concealed dangers that are known or should be known to the landowner and that the invitee cannot discover through the exercise of due care.³

A trespasser⁴ can either be a "discovered trespasser" or an "undiscovered trespasser." A discovered trespasser is a person who did not have an express or implied invitation and whose actual presence was discovered in the preceding 24 hours before an injury occurred.⁵ An undiscovered trespasser is a person whose actual presence was not discovered in the preceding 24 hours before an injury occurred.⁶ "An owner cannot, however, be held liable for a negligent condition as to an undiscovered trespasser who chooses to come upon his property without his knowledge."⁷ To avoid liability to an undiscovered trespasser, a property owner must not engage in intentional misconduct that causes the injury.⁸ The duty owed to a discovered trespasser is broader and includes:

- refraining from gross negligence or intentional misconduct that causes the injury; and
- warning the trespasser of hidden dangerous conditions.⁹

Current Law for Private Landowners or Lessees who Allow the Public on Their Land

Section 375.251, F.S., provides limited liability protection to private landowners who enter into "lease" agreements with the state to provide outdoor recreational activities on their land or who otherwise provide recreational opportunities to the public. To take advantage of the limited liability protection afforded by statute, the property owner:

- cannot charge for entry to the property or conduct commercial or other activity where profit is derived from public patronage on any part of the property;¹⁰ or

- may lease¹¹ the property to the state for outdoor recreational purposes.¹²

“Outdoor recreational purposes” include, but are not limited to, “hunting, fishing, swimming, boating, camping, picnicking, hiking, pleasure driving, nature study, water skiing, motorcycling, and visiting historical, archaeological, scenic or scientific sites.”¹³

Limitation of Liability for Private Landowners Who Enter Into Leases with the State

If private landowners enter into leases with the state to provide recreational opportunities on their land, they are provided with limited liability protection. If, however, the written agreements are anything other than a lease, the law is silent. For example, the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission may enter into leases with private landowners for the purpose of facilitating scheduled hunts. The only purpose of the lessor/lessee relationship is to avail the private party of the liability protection provided by s. 375.251, F.S. This arrangement may create legal obligations and rights that exceed what is necessary to accomplish the specific goal of offering hunts to the public.

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission wants to provide outdoor recreational activities on privately owned lands that would not require the degree of legal control and complexity of a lease. In some instances use or management agreements, contracts for services or easements may be more appropriate arrangements between private landowners and the state.¹⁴ When a landowner enters into a lease with the state, the landowner gives the state a possessory interest in the property. Other contractual arrangements may transfer fewer rights to the state and do not give the state a possessory interest in the land. For instance, if a landowner grants the state an easement to a property, the state has a limited right to use the property for a specific purpose.

An easement is an incorporeal, nonpossessory interest in land which concerns the use of the land of another. An easement is not an estate in land and does not convey title to land or dispossess the owner of the land subject to the easement. Instead, an easement only grants the right to use the property for some particular purpose or purposes.¹⁵

The state would only exercise as much control over the property as is necessary to use the easement for the intended purpose. This is a more limited nonpossessory interest in the land. The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission indicates the state may also benefit from alternative types of written arrangements because the parties will not be subject to landlord/tenant law, which creates certain obligations on both the landowner and the state.¹⁶

Private Landowners Who Allow the Public to Use Their Land for Recreational Activities

Under current law, private landowners who make their land available to the public for outdoor recreational activities are also afforded limited liability protection. This protection does not apply for individuals or groups of individuals.¹⁷ For example, if landowners allow troops of Boy Scouts on their land but do not want anyone else in the general public to have the same access, they are not afforded any limitation on liability protection.

According to the FWC, Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana and South Carolina all provide landowner liability protection to landowners who allow people other than the general public to use their land for recreational purposes.¹⁸

III. Effect of Proposed Changes:

This bill specifies ways a private property owner may limit his or her liability to persons allowed onto the property for outdoor recreational purposes.

Hunting, Fishing, Wildlife Viewing

Under the bill, a property owner may limit his or her liability to a person allowed on the property for hunting, fishing, or wildlife viewing if the property owner:

- notifies the person upon entry to the land that the property owner's liability is limited under state law; and
- does not impose a charge or derive revenue from patronage of the property for outdoor recreational purposes.

This provision does not require a property owner to provide access to the property to the general public in order to receive the benefit of the limitation on liability.

Outdoor Recreational Purposes/Agreements with the State

Under the bill, a property owner's may limit his or her liability to a person allowed on the property for outdoor recreational purposes if the property owner enters into a written agreement with the state concerning the property for the benefit of the public. Existing law requires the property owner to enter a lease with the state to receive the benefit of the liability limitation.

This change will enable the estate to execute written agreements to expand outdoor recreational activities without taking a leasehold interest in the property where the activities are conducted. This may simplify the legal arrangement and provide better protection for a private property owner should a lawsuit arise.

IV. Constitutional Issues:

A. Municipality/County Mandates Restrictions:

None.

B. Public Records/Open Meetings Issues:

None.

C. Trust Funds Restrictions:

None.

D. Other Constitutional Issues

Article 1, section 21 of the Florida Constitution addresses access to the courts. It states, “[t]he courts shall be open to every person for redress of any injury.” Tort limitations may implicate judicial review under this section of the Florida Constitution; however, the Florida Supreme Court has held that the current statute does not deny access to courts.¹⁹

The Florida Supreme Court in Kluger v. White announced a test that the Legislature must meet when it abolishes a common law or statutory right of redress. But [the Supreme Court] also noted the distinction between abolishing a cause of action and merely changing a standard of care.²⁰

In *Iglesia v. Floran*²¹ the Court held that although a 1978 amendment to a workers’ compensation statute²² precluded liability for simple negligence, the statute did not implicate the access to courts provision in the State Constitution.²³

The Florida Supreme Court has repeatedly held that a statute that merely alters the standard of care owed by one party to another or increases the degree of negligence

¹⁹ See Abdin v. Fischer, 374 So. 2d 1379 (1979) (holding that s. 375.251, F.S., limiting liability of owners and lessees who provide the public with a park area for outdoor recreational purposes, is a reasonable exercise of legislative power and does not violate Art. 1, s. 21, FLA. CONST., regarding access to courts).

²¹ Iglesia v. Floran, 394 So. 2d 994 (Fla. 1981).

²² Section 440.11(1), F.S., as amended by s. 2 of ch. 78-300, Laws of Florida, “grants immunity from tort liability to co-employees who, while in the course of their employment, negligently injure other employees of the same employer, unless the employees act with willful and wanton disregard or unprovoked physical aggression or with gross negligence.” (cited in Iglesia, 394 So. 2d at 995).

²³ Iglesia, 394 So. 2d at 995-96 (citing McMillan v. Nelson, 5 So. 2d 867 (Fla. 1942)). The Court described its rationale that “[s]ection 440.11[(1), F.S., as amended] still provides a cause of action for gross negligence just as the court-sustained ‘guest statute’ did. The Florida Legislature has broad powers in enacting legislation. The acts that it passes are to be sustained unless they run afoul of a limitation placed upon them by the Florida Constitution or violate a provision of the United States Constitution.”

necessary to maintain a successful tort action does not abolish a preexisting right of access and does not, therefore, implicate Article I, Section 21 of the State Constitution. In Abdin v. Fischer, the Court upheld a statute that exempted property owners from liability for injuries occurring on private property set aside for public recreation, unless the owner inflicted “deliberate, willful, or malicious injury to persons or property.”²⁴

Fischer*, 374 So. 2d 1379, 1380-81 (Fla. 1979) (holding that to the extent the “statute alters the standard of care owed to plaintiff by defendants, this type of modification by the legislature is not prohibited by the constitution.” The Florida Supreme Court noted in Kluger that there is a “distinction between abolishing a cause of action and merely changing a standard of care.”).
