A. COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTE..... Statement of Substantial Changes

B. AMENDMENTS..... Technical amendments were recommended

Amendments were recommended

Significant amendments were recommended

I. Summary:

CS/CS/SB 1384 amends statutory provisions relating to civil causes of action against nursing homes. The bill:

- Requires the court to hold an evidentiary hearing before allowing a claim for punitive damages to proceed.
- Prohibits the use of a state or federal survey report of nursing facilities to establish an entitlement to punitive damages.

This bill substantially amends section 400.0237, Florida Statutes.

II. Present Situation:

Causes of Action in Nursing Homes

Section 400.022, F.S., specifies the rights and responsibilities of nursing home residents. Section 400.023, F.S., creates a statutory cause of action against nursing homes that violate the statutory rights of residents. The action may be brought in any court to enforce the resident's rights and to recover actual and punitive damages for any violation of a resident's statutory rights or for negligence.¹ Prevailing plaintiffs may be entitled to recover reasonable attorney fees plus costs of the action along with actual and punitive damages.²

Sections 400.023-400.0238, F.S., provide the exclusive remedy for a cause of action for recovery of damages for the personal injury or death of a nursing home resident arising out of negligence or a violation of a resident's statutory rights. A claim for punitive damages is not permitted unless there is a reasonable showing by evidence in the record or proffered by the claimant which would provide a reasonable basis for recovery of such damages.³ A defendant may be held liable for punitive damages only if the trier of fact, based on clear and convincing evidence, finds that the defendant was personally guilty of intentional misconduct or gross negligence as defined in s. 400.0237(2), F.S.⁴

In the case of an employer, principal, corporation, or other entity, punitive damages may be imposed for conduct of an employee or agent only for intentional misconduct or gross negligence which is proven by clear and convincing evidence if the employer actively and knowingly participated in the conduct, ratified or consented to the conduct, or engaged in conduct that constituted gross negligence and that contributed to the loss, damages, or injury suffered by the claimant.⁵

Elements in a Civil Action Under s. 400.023, F.S.

Section 400.023(2), F.S., provides that in any claim alleging a violation of a resident's rights or alleging that negligence caused injury to or the death of a resident, the claimant must prove, by a preponderance of the evidence:

- The defendant owed a duty to the resident;
- The defendant breached the duty to the resident;
- The breach of the duty is a legal cause of loss, injury, death, or damage to the resident; and
- The resident sustained loss, injury, death, or damage as a result of the breach.

In general, the Florida Supreme Court has set forth the elements of a negligence action:

- A duty, or obligation, recognized by the law, requiring the [defendant] to conform to a certain standard of conduct, for the protection of others against unreasonable risks;
- A failure on the [defendant's] part to conform to the standard required: a breach of the duty;
- A reasonably close causal connection between the conduct and the resulting injury;⁶ and
- Actual loss or damage.⁷

Current law provides that in any claim brought pursuant to s. 400.023, F.S., a licensee, person, or entity has the duty to exercise "reasonable care" and nurses⁸ have the duty to exercise care "consistent with the prevailing professional standard of care."⁹

Punitive Damages

Current law provides for recovery of punitive damages by a claimant. Punitive damages “are not compensation for injury. Instead, they are private fines levied by civil juries to punish reprehensible conduct and to deter its future occurrence.”¹⁰ For a claim for damages relating to a violation of resident rights or negligence in a nursing home, punitive damages are generally limited to three times the amount of compensatory damages or $1 million, whichever is greater.¹¹ Damages can exceed $1 million if the jury finds that the wrongful conduct was motivated primarily by unreasonable financial gain and determines that the unreasonably dangerous nature of the conduct, together with the high likelihood of injury resulting from the conduct, was actually known by the managing agent, director, officer, or other person responsible for making policy decisions on behalf of the defendant.¹² If the jury finds that the defendant had a specific intent to harm the claimant and determines that the defendant’s conduct did in fact harm the claimant, there is no cap on punitive damages.¹³

Evidentiary Requirements to Bring a Punitive Damages Claim

Section 400.0237(1), F.S., provides:

In any action for damages brought under this part, no claim for punitive damages shall be permitted unless there is a reasonable showing by evidence in the record or proffered by the claimant which would provide a reasonable basis for recovery of such damages. The claimant may move to amend her or his complaint to assert a claim for punitive damages as allowed by the rules of civil procedure. The rules of civil procedure shall be liberally construed so as to allow the claimant discovery of evidence which appears reasonably calculated to lead to admissible evidence on the issue of punitive damages. No discovery of financial worth shall proceed until after the pleading concerning punitive damages is permitted.

A court discussed how a claimant can make a proffer to assert a punitive damages claim:

[A] ‘proffer’ according to traditional notions of the term, connotes merely an ‘offer’ of evidence and neither the term standing alone nor the statute itself calls for an adjudication of the underlying veracity of that which is submitted, much less for countervailing evidentiary submissions. Therefore, a proffer is merely a representation of what evidence the defendant proposes to present and is not actual evidence. A reasonable showing by evidence in the record would typically include depositions, interrogatories, and requests for admissions that have been filed with the court. Hence, an evidentiary hearing where witnesses testify and evidence is offered and scrutinized under the pertinent evidentiary rules, as in a trial, is neither contemplated nor mandated by the statute in order to determine whether a reasonable basis has been established to plead punitive damages.^{14, 15}

Punitive damages claims are often raised after the initial complaint has been filed. Once a claimant discovers enough evidence that the claimant believes justifies a punitive damages claim, the claimant files a motion to amend the complaint to add a punitive damages action. The trial judge considers the evidence presented and proffered by the claimant to determine whether the claim should proceed.

Current law does not require a showing of admissibility before the proceedings begin or to authorize the claimant and defendant to present evidence before a judge authorizes a claim for punitive damages. Current law contemplates that the claimant will proffer evidence and the court, considering the proffer in the light most favorable to the claimant, will determine whether reasonable basis exists to allow the claimant's punitive damages case to proceed.¹⁶ However, discovery of the defendant's financial worth may not proceed until the pleading on punitive damages is permitted.¹⁷

Individual Liability for Punitive Damages

Section 400.0237(2), F.S., provides:

A defendant may be held liable for punitive damages only if the trier of fact, based on clear and convincing evidence, finds that the defendant was personally guilty of intentional misconduct¹⁸ or gross negligence.¹⁹

Vicarious Liability for Punitive Damages

Punitive damages claims are sometimes brought under a theory of vicarious liability where an employer is held responsible for the acts of an employee. Section 400.0237(3), F.S., provides that in the case of an employer, principal, corporation, or other legal entity, punitive damages may be imposed for the conduct of an employee or agent only if the conduct of the employee or agent meets certain criteria²⁰ and:

- The employer, principal, corporation, or other legal entity actively and knowingly participated in such conduct;
- The officers, directors, or managers of the employer, principal, corporation, or other legal entity condoned, ratified, or consented to such conduct; or

¹⁵ The Despain court was discussing a prior version of the punitive damages statute relating to nursing home litigation, but the language on proffering in that statute is the same as that in current law.

¹⁶ See Estate of Despain, supra, note 16.

¹⁷ See s. 400.0237(1)(b), F.S.

¹⁸ "Intentional misconduct" is actual knowledge of the wrongfulness of the conduct and the high probability that injury or damage to the claimant will result and, despite that knowledge, intentionally pursuing a course of conduct that results in injury or damage. See s. 400.0237(2)(a), F.S.

¹⁹ "Gross negligence" is conduct that is so reckless or wanting in care such that it constitutes a conscious disregard or indifference to the life, safety, or rights of persons exposed to such conduct. See s. 400.0237(2)(b), F.S.

²⁰ Criteria are whether the defendant was personally guilty of intentional misconduct or gross negligence.

- The employer, principal, corporation, or other legal entity engaged in conduct that constituted gross negligence and that contributed to the loss, damages, or injury suffered by the claimant.

III. Effect of Proposed Changes:

Evidentiary Requirements to Bring a Punitive Damages Claim

The bill provides that a claimant may not bring a claim for punitive damages unless admissible evidence submitted by the parties provides a reasonable basis for the recovery of punitive damages. The bill requires the court to conduct an evidentiary hearing where all parties present evidence. The judge must find that a reasonable basis exists to believe that the claimant will be able to demonstrate, by clear and convincing evidence, that the recovery of punitive damages is warranted. These requirements limit a judge to considering only admissible evidence.

Current law provides that the rules of civil procedure are to be liberally construed to allow the claimant discovery of admissible evidence on the issue of punitive damages. The bill removes that provision from statute. Discovery in civil cases is governed by the Florida Rules of Civil Procedure. Because the rules govern discovery, the effect of removing the provision, if any, is not clear.

The bill clarifies that the claimant may not proceed with discovery on the defendant's financial worth until after the trial judge approves the pleading on punitive damages.

Individual Liability for Punitive Damages

The bill provides that a defendant, including the licensee or management company against whom punitive damages is sought, may be held liable for punitive damages only if the trier of fact, based on clear and convincing evidence, finds that "a specific person or corporate defendant actively and knowingly participated in intentional misconduct or engaged in conduct that constitutes gross negligence and contributed to the loss, damages, or injury suffered by the claimant."

The bill strikes the current standard jury instructions which provide for punitive damages if the defendant was "personally guilty of intentional misconduct."²¹ The bill requires that the defendant "actively and knowingly participated in intentional misconduct."

Vicarious Liability for Punitive Damages

The bill provides that in the case of vicarious liability of an employer, principal, corporation, or other legal entity, punitive damages may not be imposed for the conduct of an employee or agent unless:

- An identified employee or agent actively and knowingly participated in intentional misconduct, or engaged in conduct that constituted gross negligence, and that conduct contributed to the loss, damages, or injury suffered by the claimant; and

- Officers, directors, or managers of the actual employer corporation or legal entity condoned, ratified, or consented to the specific conduct alleged.

The bill provides that a state or federal survey report of nursing facilities may not be used to establish an entitlement to punitive damages.

VIII. Additional Information:

- A. Committee Substitute – Statement of Substantial Changes:
(Summarizing differences between the Committee Substitute and the prior version of the bill.)

CS/CS by Health Policy on April 16, 2013:

The CS for CS clarifies that the hearing the court must conduct before a plaintiff is allowed to bring a punitive damages claim is evidentiary hearing where all parties submit evidence.

CS by Judiciary on April 1, 2013:

The committee substitute removes section 1 from the underlying bill, which would have amended s. 400.0023, F.S., to:

- Limit the class of persons who may be sued for a violation of a nursing home resident's rights to only the nursing home licensee, a management company employed by a nursing home licensee, or a direct caregiver employee.
- Make certain provisions of law the exclusive remedy against a nursing home licensee management company for a cause of action for the recovery damages for the personal injury or death of a nursing home resident arising out of negligence or a violation of a resident's statutory rights.
- Require the court to hold an evidentiary hearing to determine if sufficient evidence or a reasonable basis exists to find that a person or entity other than the nursing home licensee, the management company for the nursing home, or a direct caregiver owed a specific legal duty to the resident, breached that duty, and the breach of that duty is the legal cause of actual loss, injury, damage, or death to the resident.
