I. Summary:

CS/SB 1738 provides:

- Legislative findings that subjecting motor vehicle dealers and their leasing and rental affiliates to vicarious liability under the dangerous instrumentality doctrine is both unfair and economically disadvantageous to motor vehicle dealers, their leasing and rental affiliates, and state consumers in that it causes dealers and their affiliates to suffer higher insurance costs, which are then passed on to consumers;
- That a motor vehicle dealer, or a motor vehicle dealer's leasing or rental affiliate, that provides a temporary replacement vehicle to a customer whose vehicle is being repaired, serviced, or adjusted by the dealer is immune from any cause of action and is not liable, vicariously or directly, under general law. The motor vehicle dealer or affiliate is granted immunity as long as there is no negligent or criminal wrongdoing on the part of the dealer or affiliate;
- The limits on liability do not apply if there is a replacement vehicle mechanical failure or defect; and
- The limits on liability do not apply unless there is a written rental or use agreement that names the drivers and the motor vehicle dealer or the motor vehicle dealer's leasing or rental affiliate obtains from the person receiving the temporary replacement vehicle a copy of the person's driver license and insurance information.

The bill takes effect July 1, 2020.

II. Present Situation:

The court-created dangerous instrumentality doctrine holds an owner strictly liable for injuries caused by another person's negligent use of the owner's property. Specifically, when the owner entrusts a dangerous instrumentality to another person, the owner is responsible for damages caused by the other person. Whether the owner was negligent or at fault is irrelevant. The rationale for holding an innocent person responsible for such damages is that the owner of an instrumentality capable of causing death or destruction should be liable for damages caused by anyone operating it with the owner's consent.[1]

The dangerous instrumentality doctrine originated in English common law and was adopted by the Florida Supreme Court in 1920 in Southern Cotton Oil Company v. Anderson, 86 So. 629 (1920).[2] The Court acknowledged the doctrine was originally limited to fire, water, and poisons, but had expanded over time:

> It is true that, in the early development of this very salutary doctrine, the dangerous agencies consisted largely of fire, flood, water, and poisons. In Dixon v. Bell . . . Lord Ellenborough extended the doctrine to include loaded firearms. With the discovery of high explosives, they were put in the same class. As conditions changed it was extended to include other objects that common knowledge and common experience proved to be as potent sources of danger as those embraced in the earlier classifications. The underlying principle was not changed, but other agencies were included in the classification. Among them are locomotives, push cars, street cars, etc., and it is now well settled that these come within the class of dangerous agencies, and the liability of the master is determined by the rule applicable to them. The reasons for putting these agencies in the class of dangerous instrumentalities apply with equal, if not greater, force to automobiles.[3]

In a 1990 Florida Supreme Court case, a man leased a car from a lessor and then loaned the leased car to a friend. The friend caused a motor vehicle crash in the leased car, killing another person. The victim's estate sued the lessor of the car directly. The Court held that the lessor was liable for the death of the victim under the dangerous instrumentality doctrine, even though the lessor did not cause the accident. The Court acknowledged that the dangerous instrumentality doctrine was "unique to Florida" but justified the doctrine as necessary "to provide greater financial responsibility to pay for the carnage on our roads."[4]

The Second District Court of Appeal has acknowledged that the dangerous instrumentality doctrine creates "real and perceived inequities" and "has drawn its fair share of criticism."[5] Once a court decides that an item is a dangerous instrumentality, an owner of such instrumentality is liable for damages the instrumentality causes, even if the owner was not in control of the instrumentality at the time.

Whether an item is a dangerous instrumentality is a question of law depending on several factors, none of which alone is dispositive, including:

- Whether the instrumentality is a motor vehicle.[6]
- Whether the instrumentality is frequently operated near the public, regardless of whether the incident at issue occurred on public property.
- The instrumentality's peculiar dangers relative to other objects that courts have found to be dangerous instrumentalities.
- The extent to which the Legislature has regulated the instrumentality.[7]

If the court decides an item is a dangerous instrumentality, the owner is liable regardless of the facts of the particular case. Over time, Florida courts have expanded the applicability of the doctrine to include automobiles,[8] trucks, buses,[9] tow-motors,[10] golf carts, and other motorized vehicles.[11]

The Florida Legislature has limited the dangerous instrumentality doctrine by providing that a motor vehicle dealer or rental car company that provides a temporary replacement vehicle to a customer for up to ten days acts as the operator of the vehicle and is liable for damages up to $100,000 per person and $300,000 per incident for bodily injury and up to $50,000 for property damage.[12] If the driver of the vehicle is uninsured or has insurance limits of less than $500,000 combined property damage and bodily injury liability, the motor vehicle dealer or car rental company is liable for up to an additional $500,000 in economic damages arising out of the use of the vehicle.[13]

In 2005, Congress passed 49 U.S.C. § 30106, commonly known as the Graves Amendment, to prohibit states from imposing vicarious liability on car rental companies.[14] Vicarious liability is "liability that a supervisory party (such as an employer) bears for the actionable conduct of a subordinate (such as an employee) based on the relationship between the two parties."[15] To benefit from the Graves Amendment, the "owner" must be "engaged in the business of renting or leasing motor vehicles." A vehicle "owner" may be the titleholder, lessee, or bailee of the vehicle.[16]

The Graves Amendment, however, does not protect a rental company from its own negligence or criminal wrongdoing. If an injury is caused by a rental company's negligent or criminal act, the rental company could still be directly liable for its actions or inactions, even if an accident occurs while a renter is driving the vehicle.[17] Federal law supersedes Florida's dangerous instrumentality doctrine when a rental car company rents a car to a driver who negligently injures another person.[18]

In 2011, the Florida Supreme Court held that as it relates to rental car companies the Graves Amendment specifically preempts Florida law[19] and relieves rental car companies, while engaged in the trade or business of renting or leasing motor vehicles, from vicarious liability for harm caused by the driver.[20]

In 2019, the Fourth District Court of Appeal, relying on the Supreme Court's analysis in Vargas, held that the Graves Amendment applies to a motor vehicle dealer that provides a customer with a loaner vehicle while the customer's vehicle is being serviced.[21] In Vargas, it appears that the replacement vehicle was considered to be rented by the customer because the cost of renting the vehicle was built into the dealership's charges for servicing the customer's vehicle.[22]

In contrast to Vargas, a 2008 trial court opinion from New York indicates that the Graves Amendment which generally makes lessors of motor vehicles immune from liability does not apply to loaner vehicles.[23] The court seemed to indicate that a loaner vehicle is not a rental vehicle governed by the Graves Amendment unless the customer is charged a separate fee for using the vehicle. The court's opinion seemed also to suggest that payments by a manufacturer for warranty work could not implicitly include a rental payment to provide a customer with a temporary replacement vehicle.

III. Effect of Proposed Changes:

The bill provides the following legislative findings:

> The Legislature finds that absent negligence or criminal conduct by a motor vehicle dealer, or its leasing or rental affiliates, subjecting motor vehicle dealers and their leasing and rental affiliates to vicarious liability under the dangerous instrumentality doctrine when a temporary replacement vehicle is provided to a consumer is both unfair and economically disadvantageous in that it causes dealers and their leasing or rental affiliates to suffer higher insurance costs, which are then passed on to consumers. Additionally, application of the vicarious liability doctrine in such cases often serves to relieve the actual tortfeasor from liability.

The bill provides that a motor vehicle dealer, or a motor vehicle dealer's leasing or rental affiliate, that provides a temporary replacement vehicle at no charge or at a reasonable daily charge to a service customer whose vehicle is being repaired, serviced, or adjusted by the dealer is immune from any cause of action and is not liable, vicariously or directly, under general law by reason of being the owner of the temporary replacement vehicle for harm to persons or property which arises out of the use or operation of the temporary replacement vehicle by any person named in the rental or use agreement during the period the temporary replacement vehicle has been entrusted to the motor vehicle dealer's service customer. This limitation on liability only applies if there is no negligence or criminal wrongdoing on the part of the motor vehicle owner or its leasing or rental affiliate.

The bill provides that the term "service customer" does not include an employee, an agent, or a principal of a motor vehicle dealer or a motor vehicle dealer's leasing or rental affiliate. The bill also provides the limits on liability do not apply if there is a replacement vehicle mechanical failure or defect that is a proximate cause of harm to persons or property which arises out of the use or operation of the temporary replacement vehicle.

The bill further provides the limits on liability do not apply unless there is a written rental or use agreement that names the drivers who will be given possession, control, or use of the temporary replacement vehicle; the rental or use agreement prohibits any person not listed in the agreement from using the temporary replacement vehicle; and the motor vehicle dealer or the motor vehicle dealer's leasing or rental affiliate obtains from the person receiving the temporary replacement vehicle a copy of the person's driver license and insurance information reflecting at least the minimum motor vehicle insurance coverage required in this state.

In sum, the bill essentially makes the immunity protections that apply to a motor vehicle dealer who leases or rents a motor vehicle also applicable if the motor vehicle is loaned to a service customer.

The bill provides an effective date of July 1, 2020.

IX. Additional Information:

A. Committee Substitute – Statement of Changes:

(Summarizing differences between the Committee Substitute and the prior version of the bill.)

CS by Infrastructure and Security on February 10, 2020:

The committee substitute:

- Revises the legislative intent section of the bill to remove references to the federal Graves Amendment and to focus on why dealers should not be vicariously liable for temporary replacement vehicles;
- Removes the provision specifying that notwithstanding any other general law or case law the motor vehicle dealer cannot be held liable (civilly or criminally) if a copy of the driver license and insurance card is obtained; and
- Provides that the bill's limitation on liability only applies if:
  - There is no negligence or criminal acts by the motor vehicle dealer or its leasing or rental affiliates;
  - The customer is not an employee, agent or principal of the motor vehicle dealer or its leasing or rental affiliates;

- There are no mechanical defect or failure;
- There is a written rental or use agreement executed naming the drivers; and
- The motor vehicle dealer, or its leasing or rental affiliates, obtains copies of the driver license and insurance information showing minimum required coverage.

B. Amendments:

None.
