heritage of our Nation and ensure that future generations celebrate the legacy of American heroes and honor the contributions of visionary and patriotic Americans in our nation’s rich past.<sup>3</sup>

Instructional Materials

Each district school board has the constitutional duty and responsibility to select and provide adequate instructional materials for all students for core courses in mathematics, language arts, science, social studies, reading, and literature for kindergarten through grade 12.<sup>4</sup> Instructional materials are items having intellectual content that by design serve as a major tool for assisting in the instruction of a subject or course.<sup>5</sup> These items may be available in bound, unbound, kit, or package form and may consist of hardbacked or softbacked textbooks, electronic content, consumables, learning laboratories, manipulatives, electronic media, and computer courseware or software.<sup>6</sup> A publisher may offer sections of state-adopted instructional materials in digital or electronic versions at reduced rates to districts, schools, and teachers.<sup>7</sup> Publishers must make sample student editions of state-adopted instructional materials electronically available, at a discount below publisher cost, for use by teacher preparation programs<sup>8</sup> and by educator preparation institutes<sup>9</sup> for each adoption cycle, to enable educators to practice teaching with currently adopted instructional materials aligned to state academic standards.<sup>10</sup>

Generally, the Commissioner of Education (commissioner) adopts instructional materials according to a 5-year rotating schedule. The commissioner may approve a shorter schedule if the content area requires more frequent revision.<sup>11</sup> The Department of Education (DOE) annually publishes an official schedule of subject areas calling for adoption for each of the succeeding two years and a tentative schedule for years three through five. Under extenuating circumstances, the commissioner may direct the DOE to add one or more subject areas to the official schedule.<sup>12</sup>

Before adopting instructional materials in a certain subject area, the DOE publishes specifications for the materials. These specifications detail the courses for which materials are sought and the standards the materials must meet.<sup>13</sup> Beginning with the 2026-2027 instructional materials adoption cycle and thereafter, the DOE must publish an instructional materials adoption timeline which must include, but is not limited to, publishing bid specifications, advertising in the Florida Administrative Register, and deadlines for the submission of bids. The adoption cycle must include at least 6 months between the release of the bid specifications and the deadline for the submission of bids, and publication of an initial list of state-adopted instructional materials no later than July 31 in the year preceding the adoption.<sup>14</sup> For the 2025-2026 instructional materials adoption cycle, the DOE must publish an initial list of state-adopted instructional materials no later than December 1, 2025.<sup>15</sup>

The following chart shows the adoption schedule for instructional materials through Fiscal Year 2028-2029:<sup>16</sup>

Funding for Instructional Materials

Funding for instructional materials is provided annually by the Legislature in the General Appropriations Act and is included in the base student allocation.<sup>17</sup> Each school district must certify to the commissioner the estimated allocation of state funds for instructional materials for the ensuing fiscal year, on or before July 1 each year.<sup>18</sup> Unless a school district has implemented its own instructional materials program<sup>19</sup>, any instructional materials purchased using state funds must be aligned with the state academic standards<sup>20</sup> and included on the state-adopted instructional materials list.<sup>21</sup> Up to 50 percent of the amount the school district has budgeted for instructional materials may be used to:

- purchase library and reference books and nonprint materials;
- purchase other materials having intellectual content that assist in the instruction of a subject or course; or
- repair or renovate textbooks and library books and replace items that were part of previously purchased instructional materials.<sup>22</sup>
