ANALYSIS

EFFECT OF THE BILL:

The bill authorizes code enforcement boards or special magistrates to impose an enhanced fine for the demolition of a structure individually listed on the National Register of Historic Places or that is a contributing resource to a National Register-listed district. A code enforcement board or special magistrate must make specific findings based on competent, substantial evidence that the demolition of the historic structure was knowing and willful, not permitted, and was not the result of a natural disaster. The enhanced fine may not exceed 20 percent of the fair market value of the property, as determined by the property appraiser. (Section 1)

The bill provides an effective date of July 1, 2025. (Section 2)

FISCAL OR ECONOMIC IMPACT:

LOCAL GOVERNMENT:

The bill may increase local government revenues to the extent additional fines are collected for code enforcement violations.

SUBJECT OVERVIEW:

County and Municipal Code Enforcement

Code enforcement is a function of local government intended to enhance the economy and quality of life of counties and municipalities by protecting the health, safety, and welfare of the community.¹ Four areas of Florida law create mechanisms counties and municipalities may utilize for code and ordinance enforcement.² Under each mechanism, a local government designates code inspectors or code enforcement officers, tasked with investigating potential code violations, providing notice of violations, and issuing citations for noncompliance. Code inspectors and enforcement officers do not possess police powers. These statutes provide permissible code enforcement mechanisms that may be used by local governments in any combination they choose.³

The Local Government Code Enforcement Boards Act⁴ allows each county and municipality to create local government code enforcement boards by ordinance.⁵ A code enforcement board is an administrative board composed of members appointed by the governing body of a county or municipality⁶ with the authority to hold hearings and impose administrative fines and other non-criminal penalties for violations of the jurisdiction's codes or ordinances.⁷ A code enforcement board may adopt rules for the conduct of its hearings; subpoena alleged violators, witnesses, and evidence to its hearings; take testimony under oath; and issue orders having the force of law necessary to bring a violation into compliance.⁸ Each code enforcement board has seven members, except that a county or municipality with fewer than 5,000 residents may elect to appoint a board of five members. The local governing body may appoint up to two alternate members for each code enforcement board to serve on the board in the absence of board members.

Members of the code enforcement board must be residents of the county or municipality creating the board.⁹ Members must include an architect, a businessperson, an engineer, a general contractor, a subcontractor, and a realtor, if possible.

Code enforcement proceedings are initiated by code inspectors.¹⁰ The process begins with a code inspector notifying the alleged violator of the specific violation. The violator is granted a reasonable period to correct the violation.¹¹ If the violation is not corrected within the period specified in the notice, the code inspector informs the enforcement board and requests a hearing. The code enforcement board schedules the hearing and must provide written notice, by certified mail or personal service, to the alleged violator.¹² A period for corrective action is not required if the violation is a repeat violation; presents a serious threat to public health, safety, and welfare; or is irreparable or irreversible in nature.¹³

In each matter heard before a code enforcement board, the case is presented and testimony is taken from both the code inspector and alleged violator.¹⁴ At the conclusion of the hearing, the board issues findings of fact and provides an order stating the relief granted.¹⁵ The board may include a notice that repairs must be completed by a specified date and fine the violator for each day the order has not been complied with after the completion date or each day that a repeat violation occurs.¹⁶ All final administrative orders of the code enforcement board may be appealed to the circuit court within 30 days of the execution of the order.¹⁷

As an alternative to a code enforcement board, counties and municipalities may adopt a code enforcement system giving code enforcement officials or special magistrates the authority to hold hearings and assess fines against violators of the local government's codes or ordinances.¹⁸ Each of these methods may be used at the local government's discretion, but a local government may choose any method to enforce codes and ordinances.¹⁹

Administrative Fines for Code Enforcement Violations

A code enforcement board may, upon notification by the code inspector that repairs have not been completed by a specified date or upon finding that repeat violations have occurred, order violators to pay a fine for each day of the continued violation.²⁰ If the violation presents a serious threat to the public health, safety, and welfare, the code enforcement board must notify the local governing body, which may make all reasonable repairs to bring the property in compliance and charge the violator the reasonable cost of those repairs in addition to the fine imposed. If, after due notice and hearing, a code enforcement board finds a violation to be irreparable or irreversible in nature, it may order the violator to pay a fine.

Administrative fines may not exceed $250 per day for a first violation and may not exceed $500 per day for a repeat violation.²¹ If the board finds the violation is irreparable or irreversible in nature, the board may impose a fine of up to $5,000. When determining the amount of the fine, the board may consider the following factors:

- The gravity of the violation.
- Any actions taken by the violator to correct the violation.
- Any previous violations committed by the violator.²²

A code enforcement board may choose to reduce the amount of the fine initially imposed.²³

A county or municipality with a population of 50,000 or greater may adopt, by a majority vote plus one of the entire governing body, an ordinance that allows code enforcement boards or special magistrates to impose fines in excess of the above limits.²⁴ The ordinance may provide for fines of up to $1,000 per day per violation for a first violation, $5,000 per day per violation for a repeat violation, and up to $15,000 per violation if the code enforcement board or special magistrate finds the violation to be irreparable or irreversible in nature. In addition to such fines, a code enforcement board or special magistrate may impose additional fines to cover all costs incurred by the local government in enforcing its codes and all costs of repairs. Any ordinance imposing such fines must include criteria to be considered by the code enforcement board or special magistrate in determining the amount of the fines.

A certified copy of an order imposing a fine, including any repair costs incurred by the local government, may be recorded in the public records and constitutes a lien against the land on which the violation exists and upon any other real or personal property owned by the violator. Upon petition to the circuit court, the order is enforceable in the same manner as a court judgment, including execution and levy against the personal property of the violator, but such order cannot be deemed to be a court judgment except for enforcement purposes. ¹⁹ The Attorney General has opined, "once a municipality has adopted the procedures of ch. 162, F.S., to enforce its municipal codes and ordinances, it may not alter or amend those statutorily prescribed procedures but must utilize them as they are set forth in the statutes." Op. Att'y Gen. 2000-53 (2000). A local government may, however, maintain a ch. 162, F.S., code enforcement board and still decide to enforce a particular violation by bringing a charge in county court, or any other means provided by law. *Goodman v. National Register of Historic Places

The National Register of Historic Places is an official list of sites and properties throughout the country that reflect the prehistoric occupation and historical development of our nation, states, and local communities. More than 1,700 properties and districts in Florida are listed on the National Register.²⁶ Nominations for properties in Florida are submitted to the National Park Service through the Division of Historical Resources within the Department of State following review and recommendation by the Florida National Register Review Board. Listing in the National Register does not, in itself, impose any obligation on the property owner, or restrict the owner's basic right to use and dispose of the property as he or she sees fit, but does encourage the preservation of significant historic resources.

Demolition Permits

It is unlawful for a person, firm, or corporation to construct, erect, alter, repair, secure, or demolish any building without first obtaining a building permit from the local government or from such persons as may, by resolution or regulation, be directed to issue such permit, upon the payment of reasonable fees as set forth in a schedule of fees adopted by the enforcing agency.²⁷

A local law, ordinance, or regulation may not prohibit or otherwise restrict the ability of a private property owner to obtain a building permit to demolish his or her single-family residential structure provided that:

- Such structure is located in a coastal high-hazard area, moderate flood zone, or special flood hazard area according to a Flood Insurance Rate Map issued by the Federal Emergency Management Agency for the purpose of participating in the National Flood Insurance Program.
- The lowest finished floor elevation of such structure is at or below base flood elevation as established by the Building Code or a higher base flood elevation as may be required by local ordinance, whichever is higher.
- Such permit complies with all applicable Building Code, Fire Prevention Code, and local amendments to such codes.²⁸

However, a local law, ordinance, or regulation may restrict demolition permits for a:

- Structure designated on the National Register of Historic Places;
- Privately owned single-family residential structure designated historic by a local, state, or federal governmental agency on or before January 1, 2022; or
- Privately owned single-family residential structure designated historic after January 1, 2022, by a local, state, or federal governmental agency with the consent of its owner.²⁹
