SUBJECT OVERVIEW:

Children's Initiatives

The Harlem Children's Zone inspired the development of the Children's Initiatives in Florida. Founded in 1970, Harlem Children's Zone, Inc., (HCZ) is a nonprofit, community-based organization that aims to enhance the quality of life for children and families living in poverty-stricken neighborhoods of New York City.¹ In the 1990s, HCZ launched a pilot project to address the poor living conditions, drug problems, failing schools, violent crime, and chronic health problems that were affecting the children and families of an impoverished community.² The project began with a single block and has grown to over 100 blocks, serving tens of thousands of children and adults each year through collaboration between the local community, nonprofit organizations, and institutions.³

HCZ provides comprehensive and individualized support for children from birth through college to promote successful self-sustaining adults.⁴ This includes early childhood programs to make children school-ready, K-12 charter schools, academic support in and after school, afterschool programs, and college preparation programs with an emphasis on entrepreneurship, financial literacy, and career readiness.⁵ The initiative also helps families by providing assistance with housing and safety concerns, tax preparation, legal issues, and childrearing education.⁶

In 2024, HCZ served 22,052 youth and adults through collaboration among the local community, nonprofit organizations, and institutional partners.⁷

Florida Children’s Initiatives

In 2008, using the Harlem Children’s Zone as a model, the Legislature created s. 409.147, F.S., which established children’s zones, currently referred to as children’s initiatives. Florida children’s initiatives assist disadvantaged areas within the state in creating a community-based service network that develops, coordinates, and provides quality education, accessible health care, youth development programs, opportunities for employment, and safe and affordable housing for children and families living within their boundaries.⁸

Section 409.147, F.S. outlines the process for a county or municipality (or designated area) to initiate a children’s initiative. The governing body of the county or municipality must first adopt a resolution finding the area has issues related to poverty, unemployment, physical deterioration, and limited access to quality education, health care and social services; and that changes are necessary for the area to improve; and that state and private sectors resources are necessary for revitalization of the area.⁹ The county or municipality must then establish a children’s initiative planning team and develop and adopt a strategic community plan.¹⁰ Once a county or municipality has completed these steps, they must identify an existing qualified not-for-profit corporation or create a not-for-profit corporation to facilitate fundraising and secure broad community ownership of the children’s initiative.¹¹ The local government must then apply to a nonprofit agency designated in statute, the Ounce of Prevention Fund of Florida, Inc. (Ounce), to designate an area as a children’s initiative.

While Children’s Initiatives are administratively housed within DCF, they are not subject to control, supervision, or direction by any department of the state.¹² They are, however, subject to the requirements of chapter 119, F.S., relating to public records, chapter 286, F.S., relating to public meetings and records, and chapter 287, F.S., relating to procurement of commodities or contractual services.

The Ounce of Prevention Fund of Florida

The Ounce is a private, nonprofit corporation dedicated to shaping prevention policy and investing in innovative prevention programs that provide measurable benefits to Florida’s children, families, and communities. The Ounce identifies, funds, supports, and tests innovative programs to improve the life outcomes of children, preserve and strengthen families, and promote healthy behavior and functioning in society¹³. Current law requires DCF to contract with a not-for-profit corporation to designate new initiatives and distribute any state funding, and expressly names the Ounce as that entity.¹⁴ In addition, the Ounce provides technical assistance to the initiative not-for-profit corporations created by the local governments, to help them achieve the goals of their initiative plans.

Funding

Section 409.147(8), F.S., sets requirements for children’s initiatives to receive funding. Unless otherwise specified in the General Appropriations Act, children’s initiatives must be awarded state funding through performance-based contracts that link payments to achievement of outcomes directly related to the goals, objectives, strategies, and tasks outlined in the strategic community plan. Counties that do not currently have an initiative and are trying to establish one have priority for funding.

The Ounce has a $4.2 million contract with the Department of Children and Families to fund new and existing initiatives.¹⁵

Codified Children’s Initiatives

Five designated Children’s Initiatives have been codified into law the Miami Children’s Initiative, the New Town Success Zone in Jacksonville, the Parramore Kidz Zone in Orlando, the Sulphur Springs Neighborhood of Promise in Tampa, the Overtown Children and Youth Coalition in Miami.

Miami Children’s Initiative

Miami Children’s Initiative (MCI) focuses on transforming the lives of children and families in the historically underserved and impoverished Liberty City community. MCI connects parents with quality early learning centers, refers residents to physical and mental health services, and provides social, emotional, and educational support from birth through college and career.

With over 12 years of service, MCI has worked with community partners to create a continuum of solutions for Liberty City’s children and families, including youth development programs such as Project Promise (K–5), Promising Futures for middle and high school students, and family, social service, and health supports, including resume assistance, training, and job placement.¹⁶

New Town Success Zone - Jacksonville

New Town Success Zone (NTSZ) serves as a partnership of public and private organizations providing a continuum of services to support children and families living in the New Town neighborhood in achieving healthy development, academic success, and neighborhood well-being. The initiative includes leadership development and career exploration for students at the Young Men and Women’s Leadership Academy (formerly Butler Middle School) and Brighter Beginnings, a program for expectant mothers, their support partners, or parents of a child

Parramore Kidz Zone - Orlando

Parramore Kidz Zone (PKZ) is a children’s initiative created as part of a comprehensive effort to revitalize Orlando’s highest crime and poverty-ridden neighborhood. The initiative includes early childhood and family support programs, including the Baby Institute and the Rosen Preschool.¹⁸

In 2020, the City of Orlando replicated the Parramore Kidz Zone model in the Holden Heights, Mercy Drive and Englewood neighborhoods and served more than 9,000 children, with measurable declines in juvenile arrests, which went down 81.2 percent; teen births, which went down 49.7 percent; and verified cases of child abuse and neglect, which went down 68 percent in the community¹⁹.

Tampa Sulphur Springs Neighborhood of Promise Success Zone

Currently, the Sulphur Springs YMCA Community Learning Center, one of the foundational services provided by the Tampa Sulphur Springs Neighborhood of Promise Success Zone, provides yearly academic enrichment and classroom support, and age-appropriate enrichment activities for children. This also includes the Champions for Children’s Layla’s House, a parent and child learning center offering early childhood development and family support services for children from birth to age five.²⁰

Overtown Children and Youth Coalition

The Overtown Children and Youth Coalition (OCYC) serves Miami’s Overtown neighborhood, one of the city’s oldest communities, which was once a thriving center of Black culture and commerce known as “the Harlem of the South” during the Harlem Renaissance.²¹ Today, children and families face extreme levels of poverty, low academic achievement, and health disparities.²²

OCYC supports the community through maternal health and early childhood programs, parenting workshops and maternal and child health services²³, as well as academic success and school engagement through tutoring and mentoring programs,²⁴ and community literacy activities, including reading focused events that promote early literacy and family involvement in education.²⁵
